UTAH AND THE MORMONS.

12240 B

OF

HON. JOHN CRADLEBAUGH, OF NEVADA,

ON THE

ADMISSION OF UTAH AS A STATE.

DELIVERED IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, FEBRUARY 7, 1863.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Having resided for some time among the Mormons, become acquainted with their ecclesiastical polity, their habits and their crimes, I feel that I would not be discharging my duty, if I failed to impart such information as I have acquired, in regard to this people in our midst who are building up, consolidating and daringly carrying out a system, subversive of the Constitution and laws, and fatal to morals and true religion.

The remoteness of Utah from the settled regions of our country, and the absence of any general intercourse between the Mormons and the masses of our people have served to keep the latter in almost complete ignorance of the character and designs of the former. That ignorance, pardonable at first, becomes criminal when the avenues to a full knowledge are open to us.

Mormonism is one of the monstrosities of the age in which we live. It seems to have been left for the model republic of the world, for the nineteenth century, when the light of knowledge is more generally diffused than ever before, when in art, science and philosophy, we have surpassed all that ages of the past can show, to produce an idle, worthless vagabond of an impostor, who heralds forth a creed repulsive to every refined mind, opposed to every generous impulse of the human heart, and a faith which commands a violation of the rights of hospitality; sanctifies falsehood; enforces the systematic degradation of woman; not only permits, but orders, the commission of the vilest lusts, in the name of the Almighty God himself, and teaches that it is a sacred duty to commit the crimes of theft and murder. It is surprising that such faith taught, too, in the coarsest and most vulgar way, should meet with any success. Yet, in less than a third of a century, it girdles the globe. Its Missionaries are planted in every place. You find them all over Europe, thick through England and Wales, traversing

Asia and Africa, and braving the billows of the southern oceans to seek proselytes. And, as if to crown its achievements, it establishes itself in the heart of one of the greatest and most powerful governments of the world; establishes therein a theocratic government overriding all other government; putting the laws at defiance, and now seeks to consummate and perpetuate itself by acquiring a state sovereignty and by being placed on an equality with the other States of the Union.

Mormonism is in part a conglomeration of illy cemented creeds from other religions and in part founded upon the excentric production of one, Spaulding, who, having failed as a preacher and shopkeeper, undertook to write a historical novel. He had a smattering of Biblical knowledge, and chose, for his subject, "the history of the lost tribes of Israel." The whole was supposed to be communicated by the Indians, and the last of the series was named, Mormon, representing that he had buried the book. It was a dull, tedious, interminable volume, marked by ignorance and folly. The work was so flat, stupid and insipid that no publisher could be induced to bring it before the world. Poor Spaulding at length went to his grave, and the manuscript remained a neglected roll in the possession of his widow.

Then arose Joe Smith, more ready to live by his wits than the labor of his hands. Smith had, early in life, manifested a turn for pious frauds. He had figured in several wrestling matches with the devil, and had been conspicuous in giving in eventful experiences in religion at certain revivals. He announced that he had dug up the book of Mormon which taught the true religion; this was none other than poor Spaulding's manuscript which he had purloined from the widow. In his hands, the manuscript become the basis of Mormonism. Joe became a prophet; the founder of a religious sect; the president of a swindling bank; the builder of the city of Nauvoo; Mayor of the city; General of the armies of Israel; candidate for President of the United States, and, finally, a Martyr, as the saints choose to call him. But the truth is that his villainies, together with the villainies of his followers, brought down upon him the just vengeance of the people of Illinois and Missouri, and his career was brought to an end by his being shot while confined in jail, in Carthage. It was unfortunate that such was his end, for his followers raised the old cry of Martyrdom and persecution, and, as has always proved, "the blood of the martyr was the seed of the church."

Mormonism repudiates the celibacy imposed by the Catholic religion upon its priesthood, and takes in its stead the voluptuous impositions of the Mahomedan church. It preaches openly that the more wives and children its men have in this world, the purer, more influential, and conspicuous will they be in the next; that wives, children, and property will not only be restored, but doubled in the resurrection. It adopts the use of prayers for the dead and baptism as a part of its creed. Mormons claim to be favored with marvelous gifts—the power of speaking in tongues, of casting out devils, of curing the sick, and of healing the lame and the halt—they claim that they have a living prophet, seer, and revelator who holds the keys of the kingdom of Heaven, and through whose intercession alone access can be had. They recognise the Bible, but they interpret it for themselves, and hold that it is subject to be changed by new revelation, which (they say) supersedes old revelation. One of their doctrines is that of continued progression to ultimate perfection. They say God was but a man, who went on developing and increasing until he reached his present high capacity; and they teach that Mormons will be equal to him—in a word, that good Mormons will become Gods. They teach the shedding of blood for the remission of sins, or, in other words, that if a Mormon apostatizes, his throat shall be cut, and his blood poured out upon the ground for the remission of his sin. They also practice other revolting doctrines, such as are only carried out in polygamous countries, which is evidenced by a number of mutilated persons in their midst. They hold that the prophet's revelations are binding upon their consciences, and that they are bound to obey him in all things. They say that the earth and the fullness thereof is the Lord's; that they are God's chosen people on earth; that their mission on earth is to take charge of God's property, and, as faithful stewards, that it is their duty to obtain it, and are taught that, in obtaining it, they must not get in debt to the Lord's enemies for it: in other words, they teach that it is a duty to rob and steal from Gentiles.

They have christened themselves "The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints." They claim that Mormonism is to go on spreading until it overthrows all the nations of the earth, and, if necessary for its accomplishment, its success shall be consummated by the sword; that Jackson county, Missouri, is to be the seat of empire of the Mormon Church; that hence the Mormons are to be finally gathered, and that from that Zion shall proceed a power that will dethrone kings, subvert dynasties, and subjugate all the nations of the earth.

I have said that their doctrines were repulsive to every refined mind. Every other false faith which has reigned its evil time upon this goodly world of ours has had some kindly and redeeming features. Even the semi-theocracy of the Aztecs, as Prescott tells you, disfigured as it was by horrid and bloody rites, was not without them. Buddhism and Brahmanism, with all their misshapen fable, still inculcated, in no small degree, a pure code of morals. Nor is the like assertion untrue of Mahomedanism. It was reserved for Mormonism, far off in the bosom of our beloved land, to rear its head, naked in all its hideous deformity, and unblushingly, yes, defiantly, proclaim a creed without the least redeeming feature, and of such character that the Thugism of India cannot match it.

So at variance is the practice of Polygamy with all the instincts of humanity, that it has to be pressed upon the people with the greatest assiduity as a part of their religious duty. It is astonishing with what pertinacity through all their "Sermons and Discourses" it is justified and insisted on. Threats, entreaties, persuasions, and commands, are continually brought in play to enforce its cheerful observance. So revolting is it to the women, that to aid in its enforcement they are brutalized, their modesty destroyed by coarse, low, vile, vulgar expressions, such as I could not repeat, and would not ask the clerk to read in your hearing. If, however, my conjugal friend, the delegate from Utah will undertake such task, I will most cheerfully furnish them for him; certainly he ought not to hesitate. If they are proper to be repeated before large congregations of women and children in Salt Lake city, the representative of the church ought not to be abashed at reading them to this house. Will the delegate from Utah read them?

CONDITION OF THE WOMEN.

But their teachings, officially reported by themselves, give you a better idea of their estimation of woman than anything I could say. I shall read to you from a few of their sermons on this subject, only observing that you may pick other passages inculcating similar doctrines, containing like threats, rebukes and complaints, in nearly every sermon published in the church organ.

President J. M. GRANT, in a sermon delivered Sept. 21st, 1856, reported in the Deseret News, vol. 6, page 235, said:

"And we have women here who like anything but the celestial law of God; and if they could, would break asunder the cable of the Church of Christ: there is scarcely a Mother in Israel but would do it this day. And they talk it to their husbands, to their daughters, and to their neighbors, and say that they have not seen a week's happiness since they became acquainted with that law, or since their husband took a second wife. They want to break up the Church of God, and to break it from their husbands, and from their family connections."

President BRIGHAM YOUNG, in a sermon delivered the same day, reported in the same paper, said:

"Now for my proposition; it is more particularly for my sisters, as it is frequently happening that women say that they are unhappy. Men will say, 'My wife, though a most excellent woman, has not seen a happy day since I took my second wife;' 'No not a happy day for a year,' says one; and another has not seen a happy day for five years. It is said that women are tied down and abused; that they are misused and have not the liberty they ought to have; that many of them are wading through a perfect flood of tears, because of the conduct of some men, together with their own folly.

"I wish my women to understand that what I am going to say is for them, as well as all others, and I want those who are here to tell their sisters, yes, all the women of this community, and then write it back to the States, and do as you please with it. I am going to give you from this time until the 6th day of October next for reflection, that you may determine whether you wish to stay with your husbands or not, and then I am going to set every woman at liberty and say to them: Now go your way, my women with the rest, go your way. And my wives have got to do one of two things; either round up their shoulders to endure the afflictions of this world and live their religion, or they may leave, for I will not have them about me. I will go into heaven alone, rather than have scratching and fighting around me. I will set all at liberty. 'What, first wife too?' Yes, I will liberate you all.

I know what my women will say; they will say, 'You can have as many women as you please, Brigham.' But I want to go somewhere and do something to get rid of the whiners; I do not want them to receive a part of the truth and spurn the rest out of doors."

* * * * *

"Let every man thus treat his wives, keeping raiment enough to clothe his body; and say to your wives, 'take all that I have and be set at liberty; but if you stay with me you shall comply with the law of God, and that too without any murmuring and whining. You must fulfill the law of God, in every respect, and round up your shoulders to walk up to the mark without any grunting.'

"Now recollect, that two weeks from to-morrow I am going to set you all at liberty. But the first wife will say, 'It is hard, for I have lived with my husband twenty years or thirty, and have raised a family of children for him, and it is a great trial to me for him to have more women; then I say it is time that you gave him up to other women who will bear children. If my wife had borne me all the children that she ever would bear, the celestial law would teach me to take young women that would have children.

* * * * *

"Sisters, I am not joking; I do not throw out my proposition to banter your feelings, to see whether you will leave your husbands, all or any of you. But I do know that there is no cessation to the everlasting whinings of many of the women in this territory. And if the women will turn from the commandments of God and continue to despise the order of heaven, I will pray that the curse of the Almighty may be close to their heels, and that it may be following them all the day long. And those that enter into it and are faithful, I will promise them that they shall be queens in heaven, and rulers to all eternity."

President HEBER C. KIMBALL, in a discourse delivered in the Tabernacle, Nov. 9th, 1856. Deseret News, vol. 6, page 291, said:

"I have no wife or child that has any right to rebel against me. If they violate my laws and rebel against me, they will get into trouble just as quickly as though they transgressed the counsels and teachings of Brother Brigham. Does it give a woman a right to sin against me because she is my wife? No, but it is her duty to do my will as I do the will of my Father and my God. It is the duty of woman to be obedient to her husband, and unless she is, I would not give a damn for all her queenly right and authority, nor for her either if she will quarrel, and lie about the work of God and the principle of plurality.

A disregard of plain and correct teachings is the reason why so many are dead and damned, and twice plucked up by the roots, and I would as soon baptize the devil as some of you."

Oct. 6th, 1855, vol. 5, page 274, Kimball said :

"If you oppose any of the works of God you will cultivate a spirit of apostacy. If you oppose what is called the spiritual wife doctrines the patriarchal order, which is of God, that course will corrode you with apostacy, and you will go overboard: still a great many do so, and strive to justify themselves in it; but they are not justified of God."

* * * * *

"The principle of plurality of wives never will be done away, although some sisters have had revelations that when this time passes away, and they go through the veil, every woman will have a husband to herself. I wish more of our young men would take to themselves wives of the daughters of Zion, and not wait for us old men to take them all. Go ahead upon the right principle, young gentlemen, and God bless you forever and ever, and make you fruitful, that we may fill the mountains, and then the earth, with righteous inhabitants."

April 2, 1854, President HEBER C. KIMBALL said in the Tabernacle—See Deseret News, vol. 4, No. 20 :

"There are some of the ladies who are not happy in their present situation; but that woman who cannot be happy with one man cannot be happy with two. You know all women are good, or ought to be. They are made for angelic beings, and I would like to see them act more angelic in their behavior. You were made more angelic and a little weaker than man. Man is made of rougher material—to open the way, cut down bushes, and kill the snakes—that women may walk along through life, and not soil and tear their skirts. When you see a woman with ragged skirts you may know she wears the unmentionables, for she is doing the man's business, and has not time to cut off the rags that are hanging around her. From this time henceforth you may know what woman wears her husband's pants. May the Lord bless you. Amen."

President HEBER C. KIMBALL, in a lengthened discourse, delivered in the Tabernacle, on the 6th day of April, 1857, took occasion to say :

"I would not be afraid to promise a man who is sixty years of age, if he will take the counsel of Brother Brigham, and his brethren, he will renew his age. I have noticed that a man who has but one wife, and is inclined to that doctrine, soon begins to wither and dry up, while a man who goes into plurality looks fresh, young and sprightly. Why is this? Because God loves that man, and because he honors his work and word. Some of you may not believe this; but I not only believe it, but I also know it. For a man of God to be confined to one woman is small business, for it is as much as we can do now to keep up under the burdens we have to carry, and I do not know what we should do if we had only one woman apiece."

President HEBER C. KIMBALL used the following language in a discourse instructing a band of Missionaries, about to start on their Missions :

"I say to those who are elected to go on Missions, go, if you never return, and commit what you have into the hands of God—your wives, your children, your brethren, and your property. Let truth and righteousness be your motto, and don't go into the world for anything else but to preach the Gospel, build up the Kingdom of God, and gather the sheep into the fold. You are sent out as shepherds to gather the sheep together, and remember they are not your sheep; they belong to him that sends you; then don't make a choice of any of those sheep, don't make selections before they are brought home and put into the fold; YOU UNDERSTAND THAT. Amen.

Such, then, is Mormonism in regard to all that beautifies life in the conjugal relation—such are their sentiments and commands pronounced under the assumed authority of God upon the female sex. When President Kimball calls his numerous wives his "cows" he but reflects the Mormon idea of women in the social scale.

The view is sickening. I turn with loathing and disgust from their legalized status of systematic debauchery and lust. Before it the entire nature recoils. No wonder that it requires the whole engineering of the Mormon church, threats, and intimidations to compel the women to submit to it. I pity that man or woman who can for one moment look upon this organized, systematic, enforced degradation and prostitution with any other feeling than that of abhorrence and disgust. In matters of affection woman is a monopolist—she wants the whole heart or she wants none. But in Utah she is compelled to take the part only of the smallest of hearts—a Mormon's heart—little attention and no devotion.

THEFT AND ROBBERY.

I have said that robbery, as well as lust, was sanctified by the Mormon creed. One from many evidences of such teachings will suffice.

In a sermon delivered by HEBER C. KIMBALL, Sept. 15, 1857, after proclaiming the coming overthrow of their enemies, and their subjection, he continues :

"'Now,' says the Lord, 'take that spoil, I consecrate it unto my people. The Lord will provide for the Saints when necessary, and in his own way.'"

In the same sermon he quoted from the "Book of Doctrines and Covenants," on the same subject, as follows :

“Behold, it is said in my laws, or forbidden to get in debt to thine enemies; but behold it is not said at any time that the Lord should not take when He pleases, and pay as seemeth him good. Wherefore, as ye are agents, and on the Lord’s errands, and whatever ye do according to the will of the Lord is the Lord’s business, and He hath sent you to provide for the Saints in these last days, that they may obtain an inheritance in the land of Zion. And, behold, I, the Lord, declare it unto you, and my words are sure and shall not fail. But all things must come to pass in their time; wherefore, be not weary in well doing, for ye are laying the foundation of a great work, and out of small things proceedeth that which is great.”

The code of the Spartans allowed theft as a sort of discipline for their youth, who were to be thus fitted for the strategy of war, so necessary among a primitive and martial people; but in no country or age before has robbery been taught as a divine ordinance, the observance of which was binding as conducing to the aggrandizement of His people. Yet, here at last, in the “ferment of an uneasy civilization,” it stands forth in the boldest relief that language dare give. “The trumpet” here “gives no uncertain sound.”

SHEDDING BLOOD FOR THE REMISSION OF SINS.

But the picture, true to life as it is, has yet darker shades. Murder is openly commanded, and incessant appeals from the self-constituted Apostles of Almighty God prove beyond all doubt, that its execution is considered and urged as one of the fundamental doctrines to be enforced, and acted on by the faithful of the Latter Day Saints. The doctrines, which, from their own books I have just read, may perhaps merely disgust, but the doctrine of which I have now from the same source to adduce proofs, will horrify. In the few extracts I have to give you, (to which, if time allowed, I might add a thousand more,) the right and duty of the Church to “spill blood” is asserted in the plainest and coarsest words that our Anglo-Saxon language affords. Theft, lust, and murder are canonized in the Mormon creed.

“It is as if the fiends prevailed
Against the seraphs they assailed,
And throned on heavenly seats should dwell
The freed inheritors of Hell!”

I read to you from a “Discourse” of President Brigham Young, delivered Sept. 21, 1856 :

“There are sins that men commit for which they cannot receive forgiveness in this world, or in that which is to come. and if they had their eyes open to their true condition, they would be perfectly willing to have their blood spilt upon the ground, that the smoke thereof might ascend to heaven as an offering for their sins, and the smoking incense would atone for their sins; whereas, if such is not the case, they will stick to them and remain upon them in the spirit world.

"I know, when you hear my brethren telling about cutting people off from the earth that you consider it is strong doctrine; but it is to save them, not to destroy them.

* * * * *

"It is true the blood of the son of God was shed for sins through the fall and those committed by men, yet men can commit sins which it can never remit. As it was in ancient days so it is in our day; and though the principles are taught publicly from this stand, still the people do not understand them; yet the law is precisely the same. There are sins that can be atoned for by an offering upon an altar as in ancient days; and there are sins that the blood of a lamb, of a calf, or of turtle doves cannot remit, but they must be atoned for by the blood of the man. That is the reason why men talk to you as they do from this stand; they understand the doctrine, and throw out a few words about it. You have been taught that doctrine, but you do not understand it."

Of entirely a similar nature is a "Discourse of President Jedediah M. Grant, delivered March 12, 1854; He is speaking of what he calls "covenant breakers"—those who leave the Mormon Church, and he says:

"Then what ought this meek people who keep the commandments of God do unto them? 'Why,' says one, 'they ought to pray to the Lord to kill them.' I want to know if you would wish the Lord to come down and do all your dirty work? Many of the Latter Day Saints will pray, and petition, and supplicate the Lord to do a thousand things they themselves would be ashamed to do.

"When a man prays for a thing, he ought to be willing to perform it himself. But if the Latter Day Saints should put to death the covenant-breakers, it would try the faith of the 'very meek, just, and pious' ones among them, and it would cause a great deal of whining in Israel.

"Then there was another odd commandment. The Lord God commanded them not to pity the person whom they killed, but to execute the law of God upon persons worthy of death. This should be done by the entire congregation, showing no pity. I have thought there would have to be quite a revolution among the Mormons, before such a commandment could be obeyed completely by them. The Mormons have a great deal of sympathy. For instance, if they can get a man before the tribunal administering the law of the land, and succeed in getting a rope around his neck, and having him hung up like a dead dog, it is all right. But if the Church and Kingdom of God should step forth and execute the law of God, O, what a burst of Mormon sympathy it would cause! I wish we were in a situation favorable to our doing that which is justifiable before God, without any contaminating influence of Gentile amalgamation, laws, and traditions, that the People of God might lay the axe to the root of the tree, and every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit might be heven down.

"What! do you believe that people would do right and keep the law of God by actually putting to death the transgressors? Putting to death the transgressors would exhibit the law of God, no matter BY WHOM it was done. That is my opinion.

“You talk of the doings of different Governments—the United States, if you please. What do they do with traitors? What mode do they adopt to punish traitors? Do traitors to that Government forfeit their lives? Examine, also, the doings of other earthly governments on this point, and you find the same practice universal. I am not aware that there are any exceptions. But people will look into books of theology, and argue that the people of God have a right to try people for fellowship, but they have no right to try them on property or life. That makes the Devil laugh, saying: I have got them on a hook now; they can cut them off, and I will put eight or ten spirits worse than they are into their tabernacles, and send them back to mob them.”

President Brigham Young (February 8, 1857) said, in a discourse in the Tabernacle. (See Deseret News, vol. 6, page 397 :)

“But now I say, in the name of the Lord, that if this people will sin no more, but faithfully live their religion, their sins will be forgiven them without taking life. You are aware that when Brother Cummings came to the point of loving our neighbors, he could say yes or no, as the case might be; that is true. But I want to connect it with the doctrine you read in the Bible. When will we love our neighbor as ourselves? In the first place, Jesus said that no man hateth his own flesh. It is admitted by all that every person loves himself. Now, if we do rightly love ourselves, we want to be saved and continue to exist. We want to go into the kingdom where we can enjoy eternity, and see no more sorrow nor death. This is the desire of every person who believes in God. Now, take a person in this congregation who has knowledge with being saved in the kingdom of our God and our Father, and being exalted an exalted one—who knows and understands the principles of eternal life, and sees the beauty and excellency of the eternities before him compared with the vain and foolish things of the world; and suppose he is overtaken in a gross fault—that he has committed a sin which he knows will deprive him of that exaltation which he desires, and that he cannot attain to it without the shedding of his blood; and also knows that by having his blood shed, he will atone for that sin and be saved, and exalted with the Gods; is there a man or woman in this house but what would say: ‘Shed my blood, that I may be saved and exalted with the Gods?’

“All mankind love themselves; and let these principles be known by an individual, and he would be glad to have his blood shed. That would be loving themselves even unto an eternal exaltation. Will you love your brothers or sisters likewise, when they have committed a sin that cannot be atoned for without the shedding of their blood. Will you love that man or woman well enough to shed their blood. That is what Jesus Christ meant. He never told a man or woman to love their enemies in their wickedness. He never intended any such thing.

* * * * *

“I could refer you to plenty of instances where men have been righteously slain in order to atone for their sins. I have seen scores and hundreds of people for whom there would have been a chance in the last resurrection if their lives had been taken and their blood spilled upon the ground as a smoking incense to the Almighty, but who are now angels to the devil, until our elder brother, Jesus Christ raises them up, conquers death, hell, and the grave. I have known a great many men who have left this church, for whom there is no chance whatever for exaltation; but if their blood had been spilled, it would have been better for them. The wickedness and ignorance of the nations forbid this principle being in full force, but the time will come when the law of God will be in full force.

"This is loving our neighbor as ourselves; if he needs help, help him; and if he wants salvation, and it is necessary to spill his blood upon the ground in order that he may be saved, spill it. Any of you who understand the principles of eternity, if you have sinned a sin requiring the shedding of blood, except the sin unto death, would not be satisfied nor rest until your blood should be spilled, that you might gain that salvation you desire. That is the way to love mankind."

President J. M. GRANT said, September 21, 1856, Deseret News, vol. 6, page 235 :

"I say there are men and women here that I would advise to go to the President immediately, and ask him to appoint a committee to attend to their case; and then let a place be selected, and let that committee shed their blood.

"MEAN DEVILS" GOOD MORMON PREACHERS.

In a reported sermon, delivered by Brigham Young, Nov. 9, 1856, Deseret News, vol. 6, p. 291. After speaking of not embracing men in his religion, he said :

"Some of the elders seemed to be tripped up in a moment if the wicked can find any fault with the members of this church; but, bless your souls, I would not yet have this people faultless, for the day of separation has not yet arrived. I have many a time, in this stand, dared the world to produce as mean devils as we can—we can beat them at anything. We have the greatest and smoothest liars in the world, the cunningest and most adroit thieves, and any other shade of character that you can mention.

"We can pick out elders in Israel right here who can beat the world at gambling; who can handle the cards; can cut and shuffle them with the smartest rogue on the face of God's footstool. I can produce elders here who can shave their smartest shavers, and take their money from them. We can beat the world at any game."

"We can beat them because we have men here that live in the light of the Lord—that have the holy priesthood, and hold the keys of the kingdom of God. But you may go through all the sectarian world and you cannot find a man capable of opening the door of the kingdom of God to admit others in. We can do that. We can pray the best, preach the best, and sing the best. We are the best looking and finest set of people on the face of the earth; and they may begin any game they please, and we are on hand, and can beat them at anything they have a mind to begin. They may make sharp their two-edged swords, and I will turn out the elders of Israel with greased feathers, and whip them to death. We are not to be beat. We expect to be a stumbling block to the whole world, and a rock of offence to them.

Such a "sermon" needs no comment. It will be seen that the scheme of these religionists is quite broad enough to embrace polygamy, adultery, incest, perjury, blasphemy, robbery, and murder, as a part of its devilish plan.

MORMON INDEPENDENCE THREATENED.

Brigham Young, in a discourse in the Tabernacle, Aug. 31, 1856, Deseret News, vol. 6, p. 219, said:

"Mormonism is true, and all Hell cannot overthrow it. All the devil's servants on the earth may do all they can, and, as Brother Clinton has just said, after twenty-six years' faithful operation and exertion by our enemies what have they accomplished? They have succeeded in making us an organized Territory, and they are determined to make us an independent State or Government, as the Lord lives. (The congregation shouted Amen.)

"I say, as the Lord lives, we are bound to become a sovereign State in the Union, or an independent nation by ourselves."

* * * * *

"I have frequently told you, and I tell you again, that the very report of the church and kingdom of God.

"The sound of Mormonism is a terror to towns, counties, States, the pretended republican governments, and to all the world.

"Why, because as the Lord Almighty lives, and the prophets have ever. This work is destined to revolutionize the world, and bring all under subjection to the law of God."

The Church government established by the Mormons to carry into operation the teachings from which I have so copiously extracted, is one of the most complete despotisms on the face of the earth. The mind of one man permeates through the whole mass of the people, and subjects to its unrelenting tyranny the souls and bodies of all. It reigns supreme in church and State, in morals, and even in the minutest domestic and social arrangements. Brigham's house is at once tabernacle, capitol, and harem; and Brigham himself is king, priest, lawgiver, and chief polygamist. Is treason hatched in Utah—Brigham is the head traitor. Are rebel troops mustered against the United States—Brigham is their commander-in-chief. Is a law to be enacted—Brigham's advice determines it. Is an offending "Gentile" or an apostate Mormon to be assassinated—the order emanates from Brigham. In addition to all this, he heals the afflicted by the laying on of hands, and comforts the widow by becoming her husband. It may be asked, does he do this without compensation? No, his pay is both high and certain. He taxes his deluded followers to the extent of all surplus property upon their arrival in the Territory. He subsequently taxes them to the extent of one-tenth of their annual productions and labor, and if reluctant to pay, he mercilessly snatches all that they have. He has through the legislature unrestricted license to tax merchants. By legislation, all estrays in the Territory are impounded and sold, and the proceeds paid over to him. By like authority he seizes upon the great highway between our Atlantic and Pacific possessions, grants exclusive rights to erect bridges and ferries across all the streams in the Territory—fixes the toll at enormous rates, ranging from five to ten dollars for a team—expressly providing in the law that a portion of the receipts shall be paid over to himself, by which means, whether willing or unwilling, the emigrant to the Pacific coast is forced to build up the Church, and furnish money to emigrate pious sisters to Zion to replenish the harems of the hoary headed leaders of the Church; and as if to consummate the matter of pay, all escheats in the Territory are to him; the property of the emigrant, and even the habiliments of the deceased may be sold, and the proceeds paid over to him.

He selects for himself the choicest spots of land in the Territory, and they yield him their productions, none daring to interfere. The timber in the mountains for a great distance from Salt Lake city belongs to him, and it is only by delivering each third load, as he shall order, that the gates are open and the citizen allowed to pass up City creek canon to obtain it. Having appropriated all that he desires for his own use, he has quite extensive tracts of country furnished him by the Federal government, as capital, for his Church. He sends his agents, denominating them missionaries, to Europe, who represent Utah as a paradise, and go into the market offering each proselyte who will come to Zion a homestead of a quarter section of land—being in return compensated by the addition of females to fill the harems, and the tithing which will in the future accrue to him.

The cattle on a thousand hills exhibit his brand. He fixes his pay, —he pays himself. His pampered but plebian body reposes in a palace, and scores of bright-eyed women call him husband. His deluded followers yield him implicit obedience, and a church organization known as “Danites” or “destroying angels,” stand ready to protect his person, to avenge his wrongs, and to execute his pleasure.

Brigham is both Church and State. True, the atrocities committed in Utah are not committed by him with his own hands, but they are committed by his underlings, and at his bidding. He claims that he is not a criminal, because his hand is not seen in the perpetration of crime. He pleads an “alibi,” when he is known to be everywhere present in the Territory. He seeks to avert censure by feigning ignorance of the atrocities of his underlings. Such ignorance can only be supposable on the hypothesis that Mormonism is not a system, and Brigham is not its head. That he is a despot without power, or a prophet without the ability to foresee.

Now, Brigham is either complete ruler in Utah, or he is nothing. The complicity of the church dignitaries, Mayors of cities, and other territorial officials, in the crimes that have been committed, demonstrate that those crimes were church crimes, and Brigham is the head of the church.

The Legislators of the Territory are Mormons. The endowment oaths bind them to yield an implicit obedience to Brigham, as the head of the church, and political head of the Territory. His mandates are superior to all law. The Mormons are fanatics; they will keep their oath to obey him. Did not their religion induce, their fears would compel obedience, for the vengeance of Brigham, though silent, is swift, and fearful as the horrors of death can make it. Mormon punishment for Mormon apostasy is like the old curse of former Popes; it extends from the soles of the feet to the hairs of the head. It separates husband and wife; it reaches from the confiscation of property to the severance of the windpipe. Armed with such power over the hearts and lives of the people, Brigham defiantly drives the barbaric chariot of Mormon robbery, murder, polygamy and incest over all law, in defiance of all federal officials in the Territory. Brigham not only controls the legislation, but he controls the courts. He uses the one to aid him in accomplishing the other. On the 14th day of January, 1854, he caused to be passed the following law which is still in force. See revised laws Utah, page 260.

“That all questions of law, the meaning of writing other than laws, and the admissibility of testimony shall be decided by the court; and no laws, nor parts of laws, shall be read, argued, cited or adopted in any court during any trial except those enacted by the governor and Legislative Assembly of this Territory, and those passed by the Congress of the United States when applicable; and no report, decision or doings of any court shall be read, argued, cited or adopted as precedent in any other trial.”

The common law, the wisdom of ages, which has come down to us as the handmaid of our civil and religious liberty, must be done away with, that the Mormon church regulations may supply their place in Utah. But, then, how convenient it is to provide that the decisions made in a Utah court, under those church regulations, upon one day, should not be a precedent for another day. It leaves the court wholly untrammelled, and authorizes the judges or jury to make such laws as they choose in every case. It leaves the courts open to receive any new divine law which Brigham may see fit to give them. He consequently feels it to be a duty to address the judges and jurors in the Territory.

You will find a specimen discourse of his in the Deseret News, vol. 5, page 412, in which instance he sent quite a number of the jurors on missions, for violating his instructions to them as jurors.

On the 2d of March, 1856, President Grant said, in a sermon delivered in the Tabernacle :

“Last Sunday the President chastised some of the Apostles and Bishops, who were on the grand jury. Did he fully succeed in clearing away the fog which surrounded them, and in removing blindness from their eyes? No, for they could go to their room and again disagree, though, to their credit, it must be admitted that a brief explanation made them unanimous in their action.

“Not long ago, I heard that in a certain case the traverse jury were eleven against one, and what is more singular the one alone was right in his views of the case.

“Several had got into the fog to suck and eat the filth of a gentile law court, ostensibly a court of Utah though I call it a gentile court. Why? Because it does not magnify the laws of Utah, as provided for in the ‘organic act,’ by which ‘act’ and laws it alone exists as a court.

“A brief examination will soon convince a person, of any ordinary observation, that the laws of Utah are not administered in our courts, and that the judges must know that fact, and that they have been seeking, from the first, with but one exception, to overrule them.

“Our laws have been set at naught and walked under foot, and in lieu thereof a constant effort has been made to rule in common law, English law, and law after law totally inapplicable.”

This attempt of the Mormons to interfere with the administration of the law, and control the courts, has been one of the chief causes of difficulty between the judges, sent by the Federal Government to Utah, and the Mormon people. From almost twenty judges sent to the Territory, with the exception of two—Judge Zerubbabel Snow, a Mormon, and J. F. Kinney, the present Chief Justice, the only territorial judge who has not been removed by the present administration, and who bears the unenviable reputation of being the “creature and tool of Brigham Young,”—the testimony has been uniformly to the effect that the laws could not be enforced. Not one of these judges, with the exception of the two named above, have been enabled to serve out the short term of four years. Some have left in disgust, while others were driven away by force.

As one of the Associate Justices of the Territory of Utah in the month of April, 1859, I commenced and held a Term of the District Court for the Second Judicial District in the city of Provo, about sixty miles south of Salt Lake City. Upon my requisition General A. S. Johnson, in command of the military department, furnished a small military force for the purpose of protecting the court. A grand jury was empannelled, and their attention was pointedly and specifically called to a great number of crimes that had been committed in the immediate vicinity, cases of public notoriety both as to the offense and the persons who had perpetrated the same; (for none of these things had "been done in a corner.") Their perpetrators had scorned alike concealment or apology, before the arrival of the American forces. The jury thus instructed, though kept in session two weeks, utterly refused to do anything, and were finally discharged as an evidently useless appendage of a court of justice. But the court was determined to try a last resource to bring to light and to punishment those guilty of the atrocious crimes which confessedly had been committed in the Territory, and the session continued. Bench warrants, based upon sworn information, were issued against the alleged criminals, and United States Marshal Dotson, a most excellent and reliable officer, aided by a MILITARY POSSE, procured on his own request, had succeeded in making a few arrests. A general stampede immediately took place among the Mormons, and what I wish to call your attention to as particularly noticeable, is the fact that this OCCURRED MORE ESPECIALLY AMONG THE CHURCH OFFICIALS AND CIVIL OFFICERS. Why were these classes so peculiarly urgent and hasty in flight? The law of evidence, based on the experience of ages, has but one answer. It was the consciousness of guilt which drove them to seek a refuge from the avenging arm of the law, armed at last, as they supposed, with power to vindicate its injured majesty. It is a well-known fact that many of the Bishops and Presidents of "Stakes" remained secreted in the mountains until the news was confirmed beyond doubt which announced the retrograde course of the Administration at Washington. You can easily conceive the rejoicing of those who had fled, their rapturous change from the extreme of trepidation to that of joy, when at last Gov. Cumming could officially announce to his Mormon friends that the zealous efforts of the united Judiciary of Utah, to expose and punish crime and administer the law, were condemned by the National Administration. And this, too, in the face of that Administration's boast, that rebellion "had been crushed out" in Utah.

Let me say here, though it may seem rather a digression, that while it is true that the military were appealed to for aid in the administration and enforcement of the laws, and in the protection of officers and witnesses, it is as equally and undeniably true that the legal and social rights of no citizen, whoever he may have been, were for one instant infringed upon, or even endangered by such a course.

Sitting, as a committing magistrate, complaint after complaint was made before me, of murders and robberies: among these I may mention as peculiarly and shockingly prominent, the murder of Forbes, the assassination of the Parrishes and Potter, of Jones and his mother, of the Aiken party, of which there were six in all; and worst, and darkest in this appalling catalogue of blood, the cowardly, cold-blooded butchery and robbery at the Mountain Meadows. At that time there still lay all ghastly under the sun of Utah the unburied skeletons of one hundred and nineteen men, women, and children, the hapless, hopeless victims of the Mormon creed.

Time will not allow that I should read the affidavits taken. I shall publish a portion as an appendix to these remarks that you may see that I am justified in charging that the Mormons are guilty, aye, that the Mormon church is guilty, of the crimes of murder and robbery as taught in their books of faith.

The scene of this horrible massacre at the Mountain Meadows is situate about three hundred and twenty miles west of south from Great Salt Lake city, on the road leading to Los Angeles, in California. I was the first Federal judge in that part of the Territory after the occurrence. My district extending from a short distance below Salt Lake city to the south end of the Territory. I determined to visit that part of my district, and, if possible, expose the persons engaged in the massacre, which I did in the early part of the year 1859. I accordingly embraced an opportunity of accompanying a small detachment of soldiers who were being sent to that section by General Johnson—having requested the marshal of the Territory to accompany, or to send a deputy. He accordingly sent Deputy Wm. H. Rodgers, who went with me.

The command went as far south as the St. Clara, twenty miles beyond the Mountain Meadows, where we camped and remained about a week. During our stay there I was visited by the Indian chiefs of that section, who gave me their version of the massacre. They admitted that a portion of their men were engaged in the massacre, but were not there when the attack commenced. One of them told me, in the presence of the others, that after the attack had been made, a white man came to their camp with a piece of paper, which, he said, Brigham Young had sent, that directed them to go and help to whip the emigrants. A portion of the band went, but did not assist in the fight. He gave as a reason that the emigrants had long guns, and were good shots. He said that his brother [this chief's name was Jackson] was shot while running across the Meadow at a distance of two hundred yards from the corral where the emigrants were. He said the Mormons were all painted. He said the Indians got a part of the clothing; and gave the names of John D. Lee, President Haight, and Bishop Higbee as the big captains. It might be proper here to remark that the Indians in the southern part of the Territory of Utah are not numerous, and are a very low, cowardly, beastly set, very few of them being armed with guns they are not formidable. I believe all in the southern part of the territory would, under no circumstances, carry on a fight against ten white men.

From our camp on the St. Clara we again went back to the Mountain Meadows, camping near where the massacre had occurred. The Meadow is about five miles in length and one in width, running to quite a narrow point at the southwest end, being higher at the middle than either end. It is the divide between the waters that flow into the Great Basin and those emptying into the Colorado river. A very large spring rises in the south end of the narrow part. It was on the north side of this spring the emigrants were camped. The bank rises from the spring eight or ten feet, then extends off to the north about two hundred yards on a level. A range of hills is there reached, rising perhaps fifty or sixty feet. Back of this range is quite a valley, which extends down until it has an outlet, three or four hundred yards below the spring, into the main Meadow.

The first attack was made by going down this ravine, then following up the bed of the spring to near it, then at daylight firing upon the men who were about the camp-fires; in which attack ten or twelve of the emigrants were killed or wounded, the stock of the emigrants having been previously driven behind the hill and up the ravine. The emigrants soon got in condition to repel the attack, shoved their wagons together, sunk the wheels in the earth, and threw up quite an entrenchment. The fighting after continued as a siege, the assailants occupying the hill, and firing at any of the emigrants that exposed themselves, having a barricade of stones along the crest of the hill as a protection. The siege was continued for five days, the besiegers appearing in the garb of Indians. The Mormons seeing that they could not capture the train without making some sacrifice of life on their part, and getting weary of the fight, resolved to accomplish by strategy what they were not able to do by force. The fight had been going on for five days, and no aid is received from any quarter, although the family of Jacob Hamlin, the Indian agent, were living in the upper end of the Meadow, and within hearing of the reports of the guns.

Who can imagine the feelings of these men, women, and children, surrounded, as they supposed themselves to be, by savages. Fathers and mothers only can judge what they must have been. Far off in the Rocky mountains, without transportation—for their cattle, horses, and mules had been run off—not knowing what their fate was to be, we can but poorly realize the gloom that pervaded the camp.

A wagon is descried far up the meadows. Upon its nearer approach it is observed to contain armed men. See! now they raise a white flag. All is joy in the corral. A general shout is raised, and in an instant a little girl dressed in white is placed at an opening between two of the wagons as a response to the signal. The wagon approaches—the occupants are welcomed into the corral. The emigrants little suspecting that they were entertaining the fiends that had been besieging them.

This wagon contained President Haight, and Bishop John D. Lee, among others of the Mormon church. They professed to be on good terms with the Indians, and represented the Indians as being very mad. They also proposed to intercede and settle the matter with the Indians. After several hours of parley, they having apparently visited the Indians, gave the ultimatum of the Indians, which was that the emigrants should march out of their camp, leaving everything behind them, even their guns. It was promised by the Mormon bishops that they would bring a force and guard the emigrants back to the settlements.

The terms were agreed to; the emigrants being desirous of saving the lives of their families. The Mormons retired and subsequently appeared at the corral with thirty or forty armed men. The emigrants were marched out, the women and children in front and the men behind, the Mormon guard being in the rear. When they had marched in this way about a mile, at a given signal the slaughter commenced. The men were most all shot down at the first fire from the guard. Two only escaped, who fled to the desert, and were followed 150 miles before they were overtaken and slaughtered.

The women and children ran on two or three hundred yards further, when they were overtaken, and with the aid of the Indians they were slaughtered. Seventeen only of the small children were saved, the eldest being about seven years. Thus, on the 10th day of September, 1857, was consummated one of the most cruel, cowardly and bloody murders known in our history. Upon the way from the meadows, a young Indian pointed out to me the place where the Mormons painted and disguised themselves.

I went from the Meadows to Cedar city; the distance is 35 or 40 miles. I contemplated holding an examining court there, should General Johnson furnish me protection, and also protect witnesses and furnish the marshal a posse to aid in making arrests. While there I issued warrants on affidavits filed before me for the arrest of the following named persons.

Halley, Jabes Nomlen, John Mangum, James Price, John W. Adair, ——— Tyler, Joseph Smith, Samuel Pollock, John McFarlan, Nephi Johnson, ——— Thornton, Joel White, ——— Harrison, Chas. Hopkins, Joseph Elang, Samuel Lewis, Sims Matheny, James Mangum, Harrison Pierce, Samuel Adair, F. C. McDulange, Wm. Bateman, Ezra Curtis, and Alexander Loveridge.”

In a few days after arriving at Cedar City, Capt. Campbell arrived with his command from the Meadows; on his return he advised me that he had received orders for his command entire to return to Camp Floyd. The General having received orders from Washington that the military should not be used in protecting the Courts, or in acting as a posse to aid the Marshal in making arrests.

While at Cedar City I was visited by a number of apostate Mormons who gave me every assurance that they would furnish an abundance of evidence in regard to the matter, so soon as they were assured of military protection. In fact, some of the persons engaged in the act came to see me in the night, and gave a full account of the matter, intending, when protection was at hand, to become witnesses. They claimed that they had been forced into the matter by the Bishops. Their statements corroborated what the Indians had previously said to me. Mr. Rodgers, the Deputy Marshal, was also engaged in hunting up the children, survivors of the massacre. They were all found in the custody of the Mormons. Three or four of the eldest recollect and relate all the incidents of the massacre, corroborating the statement of the Indians, and the statements made by the citizens of Cedar City to me.

These children are now in the south part of Missouri, or north part of Arkansas; their testimony could soon be taken if desired. No one can depict the glee of these infants when they realized that they were in the custody of what they called “the Americans,” for such is the designation of those not Mormons. They say they never were in the custody of the Indians. I recollect of one of them, “John Calvin Sorrow,” after he found he was safe, and before he was brought away from Salt Lake city, although not yet nine years of age, sitting in a contemplative mood, no doubt thinking of the extermination of his family, say, “Oh, I wish I was a man, I know what I would do; I would shoot John D. Lee; I saw him shoot my mother.” I shall never forget how he looked.

Time will not permit me to elaborate this matter. I shall barely sum up and refer every member of this house who may have the least doubt about the guilt of the Mormons in this massacre, and the other crimes to which I have alluded, to the evidence published in the appendix hereto.

The Indians would not have saved the infant children from the slaughter. Neither could they have induced the "emigrants" to have left their protected position. It should also be borne in mind that Brigham Young at the time claimed to be, and was acting as Superintendent of Indian affairs in the Territory. There is now pending in this house a claim for thirty or forty thousand dollars, which includes about four thousand dollars for goods distributed by John D. Lee to the Indians about the Mountain Meadows, within twenty days after the massacre; and also includes pay to Lee while he was engaged in the commission of the massacre. Whether Brigham will get it or not, I do not know. This, however, I do know, that some two years ago Congress passed an act to pay to the Territory of Utah some fifty-two thousand dollars, for amount paid by the Territory in suppressing Indian hostilities in the Territory in the years 1852 and 1853. I have before me every law passed in the Territory, every appropriation made by the legislature, and the statement of the Territorial Auditor of Accounts. I defy the delegate from Utah to show that there was ever appropriated or paid from the Treasury of the Territory an amount to exceed three thousand four hundred dollars. It never was done. But you know Brigham says "that he has the most adroit scoundrels in the world in Zion, and that he can beat their sharpest shavers." So there is no telling but in his persevering he may succeed in procuring his demands for murdering, and expenses of endeavoring to purchase the Indians to aid him in his rebellion. The present claim was all made while Utah was in rebellion.

Why was it that Brigham did not report this massacre at the Mountain Meadows? Why, if he was acting as Superintendent of Indian Affairs did he not make report of the property taken at the massacre. And let me ask (my conjugal friend,) the delegate from Utah, why it was that the Deseret News, the Church organ and only paper published in the Territory, for months after failed to notice the massacre, even after it was well known in the States, and when it did so, only did it to say the Mormons were not engaged in it. Will the delegate please answer me these questions?

The motives which the Mormons had in the massacre was revenge for the killing of Parley Pratt, a leading Mormon, who, while in the act of running another man's wife and children through Arkansas to Utah, was overtaken by the outraged husband, and slain—the Arkansas courts refusing to punish the perpetrator. They, in addition, no doubt, were also actuated by a desire to possess themselves of the great amount of stock and property of the emigrants, supposed to be worth sixty or seventy thousand dollars.

This was emphatically "getting the Lord's property," as HEBER

KEMBALL expresses it, "without getting in debt to the Lord's enemies for it."

The surviving children, after they were recovered and on the way back, frequently pointed out carriages and stock that belonged to the train, stating to whom it belonged.

A great portion of the property was taken to Cedar City, deposited in the tithing office, and then sold out; the bed clothes upon which the wounded had been laying, and those taken from the dead, were piled in the back room of the tithing office and allowed to remain for so great a length of time that when I was there, eighteen months after, the room was still offensive.

What a commentary upon the condition of affairs in our country! Mormonism revelling upon the spoils obtained by murder, while seventeen orphan children are turned penniless upon the world. Yet that world has "no ear to hear, no eye to see, no heart to feel, no arm to bring deliverance." That we should allow such a condition of affairs to exist is shameful, disgraceful to us all. The disgrace does not alone attach to the weak, imbecile administration of James Buchanan and his legal adviser, who lent himself to prevent the judiciary of Utah from investigating the horrible crimes that had been committed in that Territory, and aided in shielding the criminals, but we are all guilty, and should be so held until we, by force, if necessary, compel restitution to the fatherless children, so far as it can be made.

That you may not conclude that I do the Mormons injustice in charging upon them this horrible massacre, I shall publish in the Appendix to my remarks reports of different Government officials who have visited that section of our country.

Major, now General Carlton, visited that region—he also corroborates all that is contained in the abstracts I make from official reports. At the time he was there, he erected a monument to the memory of the dead. It was constructed by raising a large pile of rock, in the centre of which was erected a beam some twelve or fifteen feet in height. Upon one of the stones he caused to be engraved—"Here lie the bones of 120 men, women, and children, from Arkansas, murdered on the 10th day of September, 1857." Upon a cross-tree on the beam he caused to be painted—"Vengeance is mine, saith the Lord, and I will repay it." This monument is said to have been destroyed the first time Brigham visited that part of the Territory.

It has been said that we have courts in Utah, and the question is frequently asked, why do not the courts act? The uniform testimony of the judges is to the effect that the courts are powerless. More than fifteen Federal judges, who have gone to the Territory, have so stated. They have again and again told you that the entire legislation of the Territory is to prevent the administration of the laws; that the church authorities are determined that the laws shall not be enforced in the Federal courts; that the grand and trial jurors are Mormons, who are taught that the Mormon Church laws are the higher laws, and should prevail, and who refuse, therefore, to discharge their sworn duties, and have invariably refused to punish any Mormon for an offence committed against an anti-Mormon. To such an extent has this been carried, that although the valleys of Salt Lake have been replete with robberies and murders, yet the records of the courts do not show a single instance of the punishment of a Mormon for an offence committed against a "Gentile."

This is painfully manifest in the history which I now give of a term of the court held by my colleague, Hon. CHAS. E. SINCLAIR, who convened his court in Great Salt Lake city on the 8th day of July, 1859:

The Mormon grand jury, ever ready to use the laws for their protection, but never willing to prosecute a Mormon for his crimes, promptly found a bill of indictment against one Ralph Pike, a sergeant in Co. I, of the 10th infantry, United States army, for an assault with intent to kill, committed upon one Howard Spencer, the son of a Mormon bishop, at the military reserve in Rush valley. A company of soldiers were stationed on the reserve to guard the hay of the Government stacked there. Spencer had been in the habit, at every opportunity, of driving his cattle to these hay stacks. Sergeant Pike was ordered to take a file of men, and drive off Spencer and his cattle. When Sergeant Pike approached Spencer, the latter refused to go, seized a pitch-fork lying by, and attempted to stab the sergeant with it. Pike clubbed his musket, struck Spencer on the head, slightly fracturing his skull. Upon capias issued, Pike was arrested and brought to Great Salt Lake city. The day following, (Aug. 11th,) about 12 o'clock m., as Pike was entering the Salt Lake House, on Main street, to get his dinner, Spencer stepped up to him from behind, saying: "Are you the man that struck me in Rush valley?" at the same time drawing his pistol, shot him through the side, inflicting a mortal wound. Spencer ran across the street, mounted his horse, and rode off, accompanied by several noted "Danites." The guard, who attempted to fire at Spencer, were prevented by the police. Pike lingered in dreadful agony two days before he died. He was highly esteemed in the army as an amiable, manly, and gentlemanly soldier. The "Deseret News," (the church organ,) at its next issue, lauded young Spencer for his courage and bravery.

In the winter of 1857-'58, one Franklin McNeil was incarcerated in prison, being put in irons during the 'Mormon war,' for no other crime than being an American citizen. Frank sued Brigham Young for false imprisonment on the 2d day of August. The day preceding the appointed time for trial, Frank was called to the door of his boarding-house, just after dark, by some unknown person, and shot down. He died from his wound next morning, and thus the suit was abated. The murderer was never discovered.

A man by the name of Drown brought suit, upon a promissory note for $480, against the Danite captain, Bill Hickman. The case being submitted to the court, Drown obtained a judgment. A few days after, Drown and a companion named Arnold were stopping at the house of a friend, in Salt Lake city, where Hickman, with some seven or eight of his band, rode up to the House, and called for Drown to come out. Drown, suspecting foul play, refused to do so, and locked the doors. The 'Danites' thereupon dismounted from their horses, broke down the doors, and shot down both Drown and Arnold. Drown died of his wounds next morning, and Arnold a few days later. Hickman and his band rode off unmolested.

Thus, during the short term of Judge SINCLAIR's court, the earnest labors of its officers accomplished no good. On the contrary, as it appears, the majesty and power of the court was used to tie the hands of an innocent man, and lead him as a helpless victim to be ruthlessly shot down without the power of self-defence, whilst at the same time it protected his murderer by holding the strong arm of the law in terror over those who would dare to take justice in their own hands and punish the assassin of their friend. Thus, during a single term of the court, held in a Mormon community, the warm life-blood of four human victims is shed upon the very threshold of the court, and although the grand jury is in session, no prosecution is attempted, and not one of the offenders will ever be punished.

This man Howard Spencer is now in Salt Lake City, and has been ever since. This the learned delegate from the Territory will not deny.

With the history of one more case, and I will conclude. In the summer of 1858 David McKenzie was arrested charged with engraving plates for counterfeiting Government drafts on the Treasury at St. Louis. The evidence showed that the engraving had been done in the upper part of the Deseret Store in Salt Lake City. This store is within the enclosure of Brigham's Young's premises, the same being walled in with a stone wall some 12 or 14 feet in height. Judge Eckels, who issued the warrant, directed the Marshal, Peter K. Dotson, to seize the plates, and any other matter that might be found in the room where the engraving had been done, which would establish the offense. The Marshal accordingly went to the room and seized the plate. He also found another plate there, belonging, as it since appears, to Brigham Young, and used for striking off the Deseret currency; and, observing that the copper-plate upon which the counterfeit engraving had been made had been cut off one side of Brigham's Deseret currency plate he brought away with him the currency plate. After the trial Brigham refused to take them back, but brought his action against the Marshal, P. K. Dotson, in the Probate Court. Probate courts throughout the Territory held in violation of the organic act, are dignified into courts of co-equal jurisdiction with the Federal courts. It is one of Brigham's methods of destroying and nullifying the Federal courts. He installs into these Probate Courts his most devoted creatures. An appeal can be made from these courts to the District Court, but the appeal is almost always refused. I defy the delegate to show that Brigham ever brought an action in one of these creature courts of his in which he did not succeed. Of course he obtained a judgment against Marshal Dotson for some twenty-six hundred dollars. It would have been as much more if he had only said the word. An appeal is refused; execution is issued; Dotson's property is sold and he is turned out of his house—a property that would rent for five hundred dollars per annum—Brigham's agent having bought it in. Thus a good, efficient officer is ruined in Utah for having faithfully endeavored to prevent fraud upon the Government Treasury.

I have the plates here, (exhibiting them.) I have shown them to engravers in the city, and they tell me the original cost of making them could not be more than five or six hundred dollars, and say that they can be put in as good order as ever they were for twenty-five dollars. No stronger evidence could be adduced showing the absolute control of Brigham Young over the courts of Utah.

The Federal courts are powerless to do good, and are used only when they can subserve the purposes of the Mormons.

The weak, timid, temporizing, cowardly policy which has ever been pursued towards Utah by the Federal Government has only led to disorganization and anarchy and to the open violation of the most sacred rights, and has exhibited Utah before the world as the gloomy theatre where murder and robbery alternately shift the scene.

The Courts being deprived of aid and protection in the administration of the law, no arrests can be made, and no criminals brought to punishment.

Marshal Dotson, holding warrants for the arrest of almost a hundred murderers, including the participators in the horrible butcheries at the Mountain Meadows, is compelled to return those warrants unexecuted for the reason, as he solemnly states, that he has not the ability to serve them. In utter disgust he resigns his office; and in this connection his letter of resignation, addressed to the President, is worthy of perusal:

“GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, U. T.,

“August 1, 1859.

“To his Excellency JAMES BUCHANAN,

“President of the United States:

“SIR: I hereby tender to your Excellency my resignation as United States Marshal of the Territory of Utah, to take effect from the 20th inst.

“In tendering this, my resignation, I deem it to be my duty to warn you that the policy of your Administration has been fatal to Federal supremacy in Utah, and can only tend to build up, consolidate, and perpetuate the political and ecclesiastical power of Brigham Young and his successors.

“The unasked, and to this day derided pardon extended to treason, has only tended to encourage traitors, and the presence of Federal troops crippled and humiliated by the instructions and restrictions imposed on them, serves only the purpose of enriching the coffers of the Mormon church and of subserving the ends of Mormon polity.

"The courts of the United States in the Territory, powerless to do good in dreadful mockery of justice, are compelled to lend the power and majesty of the law to subserve the evil designs of the very criminals they seek to punish. Impotent to protect innocence they encourage crime.

"The Federal officers of the Territory, opposed and annoyed continually by those whose cordial support and co-operation could alone enable them effectually to sustain the dignity of the positions which they occupy, are as forms without substance, shadows without reality.

"Though willing to serve the administration from which I received my appointment, I cannot remain an officer of the Government, without the power to maintain its dignity.

* * * * *

"I am, sir, very respectfully,

"Your obedient servant,

"P. K. DOTSON,

"United States Marshal for Utah Territory."

I have endeavored to set before you a fair and impartial abstract of Mormonism and its results as practically exhibited, I am aware that compelled by lack of time, the review has necessarily been meagre. I have, however, endeavored to bring out the salient points, and if I know myself, have nothing extenuated nor set down aught in malice. I have given to you nothing but what the truth of history will prove.

I take it for granted that what I have shown, clearly establishes that the system of polygamy in Utah is distasteful to the female portion of the community, and that the manner in which it is enforced is but a system of enslaving the women, and of enforcing their subjection to the lustful desires of the hoary headed leaders of the church.

I have also shown that they teach and practice the crime of robbery under the assumed garb of religion, and that they also teach and practice the doctrine of shedding of blood for the remission of sins, I have given to you instance after instance wherein they have committed their robberies and murders. I might continue the catalogue if it was necessary.

The question now presented is, shall this system be permanently fastened upon our body politic. It may be said that under the Constitution of the United States, every man is guaranteed the right to worship God according to the dictates of his own conscience, and that the Government has no right to interfere with this people in the practice of their religious faith. I deny that the Constitution contemplates the protection of every class of persons who may assume to themselves a religious faith at war with the most cherished sentiments of virtue and morality throughout the Christian and civilized world. I contend that we owe it as a duty to manifest our disapprobation of practices and doctrines so odious, and that it is our duty to retain this Mormon people under the general jurisdiction of the Government, so that their institutions may be reached by Federal legislation if necessary, and thus show in a most indubitable manner that we are unwilling that the stain and disgrace shall be fastened upon us. It is a duty enjoined upon us by the common obligations of justice and humanity.

There can be no doubt that the mass of the Mormon community are misled in their errors by a set of heartless fanatical leaders. Their success may be much attributed to their isolation. That isolation, the fast filling up of the great basin, because of its vast mineral deposits, will soon do away with. Nevada now has a population equal to Utah. Thriving towns and cities are springing up on the Humboldt river, and in near proximity to the Mormons. Brigham sees this, and he knows and feels that he must place himself in a position to prevent the consequences to his system which will grow out of this contiguity of settlement. He feels that he cannot keep his women where they have a chance to get away, unless he can protect himself by legislation, further than he is able to do while his community remains under the general jurisdiction of our Government. It is on that account that he manifests so great a desire to become an independent State. I say he desires to become a State, for under his tyrannical sway, and with the system that is now prevalent, Brigham would be the State, and the State would be Brigham.

I say, again, there does exist, on the part of this Government, an obligation to withhold from the Mormon people, as far as lies in the power of the Government, the means of fostering and perpetuating this system. It is involved in the general duty of preserving untarnished the fair fame of our country; it is enjoined by self-respect and the promptings of an enlightened humanity. The civilized world would view with reprobation and disgust, and the American heart would shrink with shame at the admission of Utah in the family of States upon an equality with other States of the Union.

The people of Utah have nothing but ill will towards our Government. The great masses know nothing of our institutions—they come to Zion, not to America. They are hurried through the settled portions of our country without being allowed to become acquainted with our people or institutions. Upon arriving in Utah they hear nothing but abuse of our people—the whole fountain of patriotism is polluted, and they are taught that they owe neither allegiance or love to our Government. Treason and insubordination are openly taught. God forbid that this people should be admitted into the Union as an independent State. I protest against it in the name of humanity, which would be violated by the admission! I protest against it on behalf of my constituents, who have a deep interest in the institutions that are to prevail in the great American basin! I protest against it in the name and on behalf of the murdered victims of the cruel Mormon faith, whose mouldering bones are bleaching in almost every valley in the Territory! I protest against it on behalf of the down-trodden and undone women of Utah, who, with their female posterity, in all time to come, will bless those that would not aid in keeping them in bondage!

MASSACRE AT THE MOUNTAIN MEADOWS—MURDER OF THE THE PARISHES AND POTTER—MURDER OF THE AIKEN PARTY—MURDER OF JONES AND HIS MOTHER—MURDER OF FORBES.

HISTORY OF THE "DANITE" ORGANIZATION.

FORT BRIDGER, UTAH,

December 4, 1857.

* * * * *

On the tenth day of September last, George W. Hancock, a merchant in the town of Payson, came to the Indian settlements to look at some fat cattle that I proposed selling, and in the course of conversation, said that he had learned that the California emigrants on the southern route had got themselves into a very serious difficulty with the Piedes, who had given them to understand that they could not pass through their country, and on attempting to disregard this injunction, found themselves surrounded by the Indians, and compelled to seek shelter behind their wagons. He said he had learned these facts from an express man, who passed his house that morning with a message from the Indians to President Young, inquiring of him what they must do with the Americans. The express man had been allowed one hundred consecutive hours in which to perform the trip of nearly three hundred miles and return, which Mr. Hancock felt confident he would do. On the day following, one of the Utah Indians, who had been absent for some days gathering pine nuts, west of the Sevier lake, returned, and said that the Mormons had killed all the emigrants. He said he learned this news from a band of the Piedes, but could not tell when the fight occurred, or how many had been killed. One of the Utahs, named Spoods, came to the farm on the morning of the 14th, having traveled all night, and also confirmed the report of the difficulty between the emigrants and the Piedes, but stated that when his brother Ammon (chief, who lives in the Piedé country,) went to Iron county to persuade the Piedes to leave the road, the bishop told him that he had no business with the Piedes, and had better leave; whereupon an altercation arose between the bishop and the chief.

Spoods thought that the Piedes had been set upon the emigrants by the Mormons.

It soon began to be talked among the employees at the farm that all the emigrants on the southern road had been killed by the Piedé Indians, and the report was confirmed by several other persons who visited the farm; but the Indians insisted that Mormons, and not Indians, had killed the Americans.

This affair had become so much the subject of conversation, that, on the 17th, I started an Indian boy, named Pete, who speaks the English language quite fluently, with instructions to proceed to Iron county on a secret route, and to learn from the Piedes if possible, and also from the Utahs, what the nature of the difficulty was, and who were the instigators of it. He returned on the 23d, and reported that he only went to Ammon's village, in Beaver county, where he met a large band of the Piedes, who had just returned from Iron county.

They acknowledged having participated in the massacre of the emigrants, but said that the Mormons persuaded them into it. They said that about ten or eleven sleeps ago, John D. Lee came to this village, and told them that Americans were very bad people, and always made a rule to kill Indians whenever they had a chance. He said, also, that they had often killed the Mormons, who were friends to the Indians. He then prevailed on them to attack the emigrants, who were then passing through the country, (about one hundred in number,) and promised them that if they were not strong enough to whip them, the Mormons would help them. The Piedes made the attack, but were repulsed on three different occasions, when Lee and the bishop of Ceder City, with a number of Mormons, approached the camp of the emigrants, under pretext of trying to settle the difficulty, and with lying, seductive overtures, succeeded in inducing the emigrants to lay down their weapons of defense and admit them and their savage allies inside of their breastworks, when the work of destruction began, and, in the language of the unsophisticated boy, "they cut all of their throats but a few that started to run off, and the Piedes shot them!" He also stated that there were some fifteen or sixteen small children that were not killed, and were in charge of the bishop.

Lee and the bishop took all the stock, [over a thousand head,] as also a large amount of money. The Mormon version of this affair is that the Piedes went to the emigrant camp and asked for meat, and they gave them beef with strychnine upon it, and that when Brigham learned this fact, he sent word back to them "to do with the Americans as they thought proper." But I have not yet been able to learn that the strychnine had killed any of the Indians, or even made them sick. A report also reached the Indian farm on Spanish Fork, about the 15th of September, that the Snake Indians, under a chief named Little Soldier, had attacked an emigrant, named Squires, from Missouri, who was camped near Ogden, and driven off all his cattle, [over four hundred,] together with all the mules and horses belonging to him. But the Utahs made no hesitation in asserting that the Mormons took the stock themselves, and that they had learned all about it from some Gosh-Utes who live in Rush valley.

In confirmation of the truth of this report of the Utahs, I learned a few days ago from Ben Simon, a Delaware Indian, who lives with the Snakes in Weaber valley, that sometime in the early part of September, Dimick B. Huntington, [interpreter for Brigham Young,] and Bishop West, of Ogden, came to the Snake village, and told the Indians that Brigham wanted them to run off the emigrants' cattle, and if they would do so they might have them as their own. Simon says the Snake chiefs consulted him about the propriety of undertaking the theft, and he advised them to have nothing to do with the cattle, which course they concluded to adopt, but Huntington and West insisted on their taking the stock; whereupon the chiefs told them that they did not want it, and if the Mormons wanted it let them go and get it themselves, and so the interview ended. Simon thinks that if any of the Indians had anything to do with it they were hired by the Mormons, and says that he knows that the Mormons got the stock.

It may be objected by the incredulous that those charges are too vague and uncertain, and deficient in point of names and dates; in answer to which I would say, that the commission of these crimes need no proof, their existence being generally admitted. The only questions to be determined are who instigated them? and whose testimony is deserving the most credit—the Mormons or the Indians? And under existing circumstances I am free to say that I prefer yielding my credence to the more unsophisticated. I have frequently been told by the chiefs of the Utahs, that Brigham Young was trying to bribe them to join in rebellion against the United States by offering them guns, ammunition, and blankets, on condition that they would assist in opposing the advance of the United States troops into the Territory, and he has not only made these overtures by his agents, but has at sundry times made them in person. How far he may have succeeded in his plots of treason, at the expense of the government, may not as yet be fully known and understood, but one thing is certain, that the more powerful tribes of the Utahs and Snakes have so far resisted all the allurements that have been offered them and kept themselves untrammelled by this unholy alliance, and I am proud to say that they manifest no inclination whatever to participate in it.

FORT BRIDGER, July, 6, 1859.

MAJOR: I have the honor to inform you that, in pursuance of instructions received from the adjutant general's office of this department, dated April 17, 1859, I left Camp Floyd, Utah Territory, on the 21st of April, 1859, to proceed to Santa Clara, in order to protect travellers on the road to California, and to inquire into certain depredations said to have been committed by the Indians in that vicinity.

My command consisted of one company of dragoons and two companies of infantry.

Nothing of interest occurred until my arrival at the Mountain Meadows, which are situated about one hundred and fifty miles south of Camp Floyd, and on the southern rim of the basin. Here I found human skulls, bones, and hair, scattered about, and scraps of clothing of men, women, and children. I saw one girl's dress, apparently that of a child ten or twelve years of age. These were the remains of a party of peaceful inhabitants of the United States, consisting of men, women, and children, and numbering about one hundred and fifty, who were removing with their effects from the State of Arkansas to the State of California. These emigrants were here met by the Mormons (assisted by such of the wretched Indians of the neighborhood as they could force or persuade to join,) and massacred, with the exception of such infant children that the Mormons thought too young to remember or tell of the affair. The Mormons had their faces painted so as to disguise themselves as Indians.

The Mormons were led on by John D. Lee, then a high dignitary in the self-styled Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and Isaac Haight, now a dignitary in the same.

This affair began by a surprise. The emigrants were encamped near a spring from which there is a ravine. Along this ravine the Mormons and Indians crept to the spring during the night. When the emigrants arose in the morning they were fired upon, and some twelve or fifteen of them killed. The emigrants then seized their arms and defended themselves so bravely that, after four days, the Mormons and Indians had not succeeded in exterminating them. This horrid affair was finished by an act of treachery. John D. Lee, having washed the paint from his face, came to the emigrants and told them that if they would surrender themselves, and give their property to the Indians, that the Mormons would conduct them safely back to Cedar City. The emigrants then surrendered, with their wives and children. They were taken about a mile and a half from the spring, where they, their wives and their children, (with the exception of some infants,) were ruthlessly killed.

The infants were taken to Cedar City, where they were either sold or given away to such of the Mormons as desired them. It is a notorious fact that these infants never have been with the Indians. The property of the emigrants was taken to Cedar City, where it was put up at public auction and sold.

These facts were derived from the children who did remember and could tell of the matter, from Indians, and from the Mormons themselves. This affair occurred in the month of September, in 1857.

On leaving the Mountain Meadows, I proceeded on with my command to the river Santa Clara, where I arrived on the 8th of May, 1859. I sent for Jackson, the chief of the tribe, said to be most hostile to the Americans. He acknowledged that he had committed some outrages on the people of the United States. He made the most humble protestations of future good conduct, in which I put some reliance, if he is not encouraged to commit overt acts by the Mormons. These Indians are a miserable set of root-diggers, and nothing is to be apprehended from them but by the smallest and most careless party.

The commanding general having concluded that the objects of the expedition were accomplished, I returned to Camp Floyd, Utah Territory, agreeably to his instructions.

I am sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

R. P. CAMPBELL,

Capt. Second Dragoons, Com'g Santa Clara Expedition.

Major F. J. PORTER,

Assistant Adjutant General U. S. Army,

Camp Floyd, Utah Territory.

12 c.

CAMP AT MOUNTAIN MEADOWS,

Utah Territory, May 6, 1859.

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to report, that this morning, accompanied by the detachment of men furnished by your orders, I proceeded to inter the remains of the men, women, and children of the Arkansas emigrant train, massacred by the Mormons at the Mountain Meadows, Utah Territory, in the month of September, 1857.

At the scene of the first attack, in the immediate vicinity of our present camp, marked by a small defensive trench made by the emigrants, a number of human skulls and bones, and hair, were found scattered about, bearing the appearance of never having been buried; also remnants of bedding and wearing apparel.

On examining the trenches or excavations, which appear to have been within the corral, and within which it was supposed some written account of the massacre might have been concealed, some few human bones, human hair, and what seemed to be the feathers of bedding, only were discerned.

Proceeding twenty-five hundred yards in a direction N. 15° W., I reached a ravine fifty yards distant from the road, bordered by a few bushes of scrub oak, in which I found portions of the skeletons of many bodies—skulls, bones, and matted hair—most of which, on examination, I concluded to be those of men. Three hundred and fifty yards further on, and in the same direction, another assembly of human remains were found, which, by all appearance, had been left to decay upon the surface. Skulls and bones, most of which I believed to be those of women, also of children, probably ranging from six to twelve years of age. Here, too, were found masses of women's hair, children's bonnets, such as are generally used upon the plains, and pieces of lace, muslin, calicoes, and other material, part of women's and children's apparel. I have buried thirteen skulls and many more scattered fragments.

Some of the remains above referred to were found upon the surface of the ground, with a little earth partially covering them, and at the place where the men were massacred; some lightly buried, but the majority were scattered about upon the plain. Many of the skulls bore marks of violence, being pierced with bullet holes, or shattered by heavy blows, or cleft with some sharp-edged instrument. The bones were bleached and worn by long exposure to the elements, and bore the impress of the teeth of wolves or other wild animals,

The skulls found upon the ground near the spring, or position of first attack and adjoining our camp, were eight in number. These, with the other remains there found, were buried, under my supervision, at the base of the hill upon the hill-side of the valley.

At the rate, 250 yards distant from the spring, the relative positions and general appearance of the remains seemed to indicate that the men were there taken by surprise and massacred. Some of the skulls showed that fire-arms had been discharged close to the head. I have buried eighteen skulls and parts of many more skeletons, found scattered over the space of a mile towards the lines, in which direction they were no doubt dragged by the wolves.

No names were found upon any article of apparel, or any peculiarity in the remains, with the exception of one bone, the upper jaw, in which the teeth were very closely crowded, and which contained one front tooth more than is generally found.

Under my direction, the above-mentioned remains were all properly buried, the respective locality being marked with mounds of stone.

I have the honor to be, captain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

CHARLES BREWER,

Assistant Surgeon United States Army.

Captain R. P. CAMPBELL,

Second Dragoons, Commanding Paymaster's Escort.

PROVO CITY, U. T., March 18, 1859.

SIR: I left Salt Lake City last Sunday to visit the southern Indians, and to bring the seventeen children remaining from the massacre in September, 1857, to Salt Lake city, or adjacent to it.

* * * * *

I am in possession of the facts of the murders in June and October, and have, within twenty days, received highly important and reliable information of the Mountain Meadow butchering affair. With the facts in my possession now, I may succeed in recovering some of the property. Facts in my possession warrant me in estimating that there was distributed, a few days after the massacre, among the leading church dignitaries, $30,000 worth of property. It is presumable they also had some money.

I will make such inquiry about this extraordinary affair as contingent circumstances will admit. I know that the Indians are bad enough; I am aware, also, that it is, and especially has been, exceedingly convenient to implicate the Indians in all such cases.

* * * * *

I remain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. FORNEY,

Superintendent of Indian Affairs, U. T.

HON. J. W. DENVER,

Comm'r of Indian Affairs, Washington, D. C.

SUPERINTENDENT'S OFFICE, UTAH,
Great Salt Lake City, August, 1859.

SIR: It has been my intention, for some weeks past, to give you a more full statement than heretofore given of the Mountain Meadow tragedy, and of the children saved from it.

A massacre of such unparalleled magnitude on American soil must necessarily excite much interest in the public mind. From information received from various sources during the last twelve months, I am enabled to give you a reliable account of the emigrant company in question, and the children remaining, and also some of the causes and circumstances of the inhuman massacre.

The company was composed of about thirty families, and one hundred and thirty to one hundred and forty persons, and, I think, principally from Johnston county, Arkansas.

I have deemed it a matter of material importance to make strict inquiry relative to the general behavior and conduct of the company towards the people of this Territory in their journey through it, and am justified in saying that they conducted themselves with propriety.

It is generally conceded that the said company was abundantly supplied with traveling and extra horses, cattle, &c. They had about thirty good wagons, and about thirty mules and horses, and six hundred head of cattle, when passing through Provo City, Utah Territory. At Corn Creek, fifteen miles from Fillmore City, and one hundred and sixty five miles south of this city, the company camped several days. At this place, and within a few miles of the Indian farm, (commenced a few years ago for the Pah-vant tribe, and all living on it,) it is alleged that the said emigrant company treated the Indians most inhumanly; such as poisoning a spring with arsenic, and impreg-nating dead cattle with strychnine. John D. Lee, living one hundred and fifty miles south of Fillmore, informed me that about twenty Indians and some cattle died from drinking of the poisoned water, and Indians from eating the poisoned meat.

Dr. Ray, of Fillmore City, assured me that one of his oxen died while the company was encamped in the neighborhood, and that his wife, while engaged in rendering the tallow of the dead ox, became suddenly ill, and that a boy who was assisting her died in a few days.

I have not been apprised of any investigation at the time by the Indian officials who were then in the Territory, or of an official investigation by the proper authorities of Fillmore. It seems obvious that Dr. Ray's ox died about the time these unfortunate people were camped in the neighborhood. I cannot learn, however, of any difficulty the company had with the Pah-vant Indians while camped near them. The ox died unquestionably from eating a poisonous weed that grows in most of the valleys in this Territory, and it is by no means uncommon for cattle to get poisoned and die from the effects of this weed. One or two Indians died from eating of the dead ox, but I have not been apprised that this excited any of them against the emigrants. And after strict inquiry I cannot learn that even one Pah-vant Indian was present at the massacre. Those persons in Fillmore, and further South, who believe that a spring was poisoned with arsenic, and the meat of a dead ox with strychnine, by said company, may be honest in their belief, and attribute the cause of the massacre to the alleged poisoning. Why an emigrant company, and especially farmers, would carry with them so much deadly poison is incomprehensible. I regard the poisoning affair as entitled to no consideration. In my opinion, bad men, for a bad purpose, have magnified a natural circumstance for the perpetration of a crime that has no parallel in American history for atrocity.

I hear nothing more of the emigrant company until their arrival in Mountain Meadow valley, about the 2d or 3d of September, 1857. This valley is seven miles in length east and west, and one to three wide—a large spring at each end. In about the centre, and from north to southeast, is what is termed the "rim of the basin." East of this the waters go to the lakes of Utah Territory, and those west into the Pacific. The valley is well hemmed in by high hills or mountains; is almost a continuous meadow, affording an abundance of pasture.

At the spring in the east end is a house and corral, occupied in September, 1857, by Mr. Jacob Hamblin. It is due to Mr. Hamblin to say that he left home several weeks before the company arrived in the valley, and returned home several days after the massacre.

David Tulis (was living with Mr. Hamblin) says: "The company passed by the house on Friday, September 2d or 3d, towards evening; that it was a large and respectable-looking company. One of the men rode up to where I was working, and asked if there was water ahead. I said, yes. The person who rode up behaved civilly. The company camped at the spring in the west end of the valley. I heard firing on Monday morning, and for four or five mornings afterwards; if there had been firing during the day, I could not have heard it on account of the wind."

I then asked Mr. Tulis the following questions, and received answers, to wit:

1. When you heard the firing first, what was your opinion of its cause?

Answer. I believed it was the Indians fighting the emigrant company camped at the spring at the other end of the valley.

2. Why did you not notify the nearest settlement?

Answer. I thought or expected that the people of the nearest settlement knew of the fight.

3. Why did you suppose so?

Answer. Because I saw Indians riding back and forwards on the road.

4. Was you afraid?

Answer. I was a little timid.

5. How soon did you see white men?

Answer. Two or three days afterwards—that is, after the massacre; these persons looked like travellers. I think they went to bury the dead.

6. Did you see many Indians during the fight?

Answer. During the fighting the Indians continued to run to and fro on the road.

7. How many were in the train?

Answer. I suppose 70 to 100; there seemed to be a good many women and children.

8. Did you hear any talk about the massacre?

Answer. Yes.

9. What did you hear was the cause of the massacre?

Answer. I heard afterwards: because the emigrant party poisoned the spring or some cattle at Corn creek.

10. What was your opinion of the cause?

Answer. I thought there must have been some fuss with the Indians along the road somewhere. I heard that the emigrant party had poisoned a spring at Corn creek.

11. What became of the property?

Answer. The Indians drove all the cattle and horses away. I heard they burned the wagons where they were camped.

12. What was done with the children immediately after the massacre?

Answer. I heard the Indians took them to Cedar City. I also saw the Indians drive some cattle towards Cedar City.

13. Did you ever see any of the property in the possession of whites?

Answer. No.

14. Did you ever hear any one talk about the property?

Answer. No.

15. Did you ever hear of any one escaping from the fight or massacre?

Answer. I heard of one; and he was afterwards killed at the Muddy or Los Vagos river.

This is part of the statement of D. Tulis, made to me in presence of Wm. H. Rodgers, April 13 last, while on my trip to Santa Clara. He was travelling with us from Painter creek.

I will give you a few extracts from the statements by Alfred, who is a civilized Shoshonee Indian, raised by Mr. Jacob Hamblin, and was then and is still living with him. Alfred says:

"I saw the company passing our house about sundown. It was a large company. They camped at the spring in the other end of the valley. A day or two after passing our house, I heard firing when in bed; it continued all day four days.

Question. Why did you not go there?

Answer. I had not time. I was attending to the sheep. The time they were killed, I was about a mile from them. I saw some Indians killing them. They shot some with arrows and guns, and others were killed with clubs. I talked with some of the Indians (the day they were killed;) they were mad, and I was afraid to talk much to them. Some of the Indians, during the four or five days firing, rode to and fro towards Painter Creek settlement, about ten miles east of the Mountain Meadow valley; they were riding over the hills, and riding very fast.

Question. Why did you not, during the four or five days firing, notify the people of Painter Creek and Cedar City of the fight?

Answer. I told Mr. Tulis and those at the house, when I came in from herding, about the Indians fighting the emigrants. Mr. Tulis told me to mind my business and attend to my herding. I saw the Indians killing the whites.

Question. How did the emigrants get out of the corral?

Answer. They thought the Indians had all left, and then they started out, and were coming to our house, and when they were about a mile from the wagons, the Indians, who were hid behind oak brush and sage, fell on them. I went to the place the same day, and saw the dead lying about. Some were stript, and some were dressed. The Indians were mad, scolding and quarrelling. I saw the children going past our house. (Mr. Hamblin's.) All the children stopped at our house.

Question. Who brought the children to Mr. Hamblin's house?

Answer. Mr. David Tulis brought them all to our house in a wagon about dark, the same evening of the day of the massacre.

Question. Was Mr. Jacob Hamblin at home when the company arrived in the valley and the day of the massacre?

Answer. He left home several weeks before the company arrived, and returned several days after the massacre.

These persons lived at Mr. Hamblin's, and within three and a half miles of the spot where the killing was done; yet neither were there, if one is to believe them.

I conclude, from the most reliable information, that the company promiscuously camped near the spring, intending to remain some days to recruit the stock, preparatory to crossing the several deserts before reaching California. They had no apprehension of serious danger when they first reached the valley, and for several days afterwards, or from Friday until Monday morning. The company then corralled the wagons, and made a protective fort, by filling with earth the space under the wagons. I saw the evidences of this last April.

In pursuance to arrangements, the first attack was made on the unfortunate company by Indians on Monday morning, and continued daily until Friday morning, September 4. The camp was surrounded continually, preventing any one from leaving the corral without hazarding life, during five or six days.

It is impossible to comprehend the immense suffering. On the fatal morning two wagons approached the corral, and several whites effected a compromise, the emigrants giving up all their arms, with the assurance that the lives of all should be saved and conducted back in safety to Cedar City. The company started under the care and direction of white men; the wounded, old women, and children were taken in the two wagons. They proceeded about one and a half mile toward Cedar, when suddenly, and in obedience to a signal, the work of death commenced. The murderers were secreted in a few acres of oak brush and sage, the only thing of the kind I saw in the valley. My impression is that from one hundred and fifteen to one hundred and twenty were there murdered. Several escaped; only three got out of the valley; two of whom were soon overtaken and shot down. One adult got as far as the Muddy, and was returning with two persons from California; but he was also overtaken and shot by Indians.

From the evidence in my possession, I am justified in the declaration that this massacre was concocted by white men and consummated by whites and Indians. The names of many of the whites engaged in this terrible affair have already been given to the proper legal authorities.

I will in due time take the necessary steps for the recovery of the property, which was sold and divided among certain parties.

The seventeen little children, all that I can learn of, were taken after the massacre to Mr. Hamblin's House by John D. Lee, David Tulis, and others, in a wagon, either the same evening or the following morning. The children were sold out to different persons in Cedar City, Harmony, and Painter Creek. Bills are now in my possession from different individuals, asking payment from the Government. I cannot condescend to become the medium of even transmitting such claims to the department.

Below is a list of the children recovered by me and brought to this city, fifteen of whom are now en route to Arkansas, and two detained to give evidence.

John Calvin Sorel; Lewis and Mary Sorel; Ambrose Miram, and William Taggit; Frances Horn; Angeline, Annie, and Sophronia or Mary Huff; Ephraim W. Huff; Charles and Annie Francher; Betsey and Jane Baker; Rebecca, Louisa, and Sarah Dunlap; William (Welch) Baker.

I remain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. FORNEY.

Supt, Indian Affairs, Utah Territory.

HON. A. B. GREENWOOD,

Com. of Indian Affairs, Washington, D. C.

John D. Lee, a Mormon president, has knowledge of the whereabouts of much of the property taken from these ill-fated emigrant, and, if I am not misinformed, in possession of a large quantity of it. Why not make him disgorge this ill-gotten plunder, and disclose the amount escheated to and sold out by the Mormon Church as its share of the blood of helpless victims? When he enters into a league with hell and a covenant with death, he should not be allowed to make feasts and entertain government officials at his table as he did Dr. Jacob Forney, superintendent of Indian affairs, while the rest of his party refused, in his hearing and that of Lee, to share the hospitality of this notorious murderer—THIS SCOURGE OF THE DESERT. This man Lee does not deny, but admits that he was present at the massacre, but pretends that he was there to prevent bloodshed; but positive evidence implicates him as the leader of the murderers too deeply for denial. The children point him out as one of them that did the bloody work. He and other white men had these children, and they never were in the hands of the Indians, but in those who murdered them and Jacob Hamlin and Jacob Forney know it. The children pointed out to us the dresses and jewelry of their mothers and sisters that now grace the angelic forms of these murderers' women and children. Verily it would seem that men and women alike combined in this wholesale slaughter.

This ill-fated train consisted of eighteen wagons, eight hundred and twenty head of cattle, household goods to a large amount, besides money, estimated at eighty or ninety thousand dollars, the greater part of which, it is believed, now makes rich the harems of this John D. Lee. Of this train a man, whose name is unknown, fortunately escaped at the time of the massacre to Vegas, one hundred miles distant from the scene of blood, on the California road. He was followed by five Mormons, who through promises of safety, &c., prevailed upon him to begin his return to Mountain Meadows, and, contrary to their promises and his just expectation, they inhumanly butchered him, laughing at and disregarding his loud and repeated cries for mercy; as witnessed and told by Ira Hatch, one of the five. The object in killing this man was to leave no witness competent to give testimony in a court of justice, but God, whose ways are inscrutable, has thought proper, through the instrumentality of the "babes and sucklings" recovered by us, to bring to light this most horrible tragedy, and make known its barbarous and inhuman perpetrators.

Already a step has been taken by Judge Cradlebaugh in the right direction, of which we see the evidence in the flight of presidents, bishops, and elders to the mountains, to escape the just penalty of the law for their crimes. If the vengeance of the Lord is slow, it is equally sure. The Mormons who know better, have reported that the principals, and in fact, all the actors in this fearful massacre, were Indian savages; but subsequent events have thrown sufficient light upon this mystery to fix the foul blot indelibly upon the Mormon escutcheon. Many of the leaders are well known. John D. Lee was the commander-in-chief. President Haight and Bishop Smith, of Cedar City, and, besides these, one hundred actors and accomplices, are known to Judge Cradlebaugh and Dr. Forney.

JAMES LYNCH.

James Lynch, being duly sworn, states on oath that all the material facts, stated by him in the foregoing affidavit, so far as he states the same as of his own knowledge are true, and so far as he states the same as from information derived from others, as also the conclusions drawn from the same, he believes to be true, and further saith not.

SUPERINTENDENT'S OFFICE, UTAH,
Great Salt Lake City, September 22, 1859.

SIR: Your letter dated July 2, in which you request me to ascertain the names of white men, if any, implicated in the Mountain Meadow massacre, reached me several weeks since, about 300 miles west of this city.

I gave several months ago to the Attorney General and several of the United States judges, the names of those who I believed were not only implicated, but the hell-deserving scoundrels who concocted and brought to a successful termination of the whole affair.

The following are the names of the persons the most guilty: Isaac T. Haight, Cedar City, president of several settlements south: Bishop Smith, Cedar City; John D. Lee, Harmony; John M. Higby, Cedar City; Bishop Davis, David Tullis, Santa Clara; Ira Hatch, Santa Clara. These were the cause of the massacre, aided by others. It is to be regretted that nothing has yet been accomplished towards bringing these murderers to justice.

I remain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. FORNEY,

Extract from Superintendent Forney's annual report of September 29, 1859.

MOUNTAIN MEADOW MASSACRE.

A company of emigrants from Arkansas, emigrating to California, arrived and camped at a spring, in the west end of Mountain Meadow valley on the 3d or 4th September, 1857. On the 9th of said month, and near the said spring, one hundred and fifteen to one hundred and twenty were inhumanly massacred. The lives of seventeen children were spared, who were from two months to seven years old. This massacre was brought to my official notice by a letter from the Hon. C. E. Mix, received June, 1858, instructing me to make inquiry, and recover, if possible, certain children, who, it was supposed, were saved from the massacre, and were supposed to be living with Mormons and Indians. Sixteen of the surviving children were collected in July, 1858, and were placed in a respectable family in Santa Clara, three hundred and fifty miles south of this city, and were provided for by my directions. The seventeenth child was recovered last April. None of the children were claimed by or were living with or among the Indians. They were taken from the field of slaughter the evening of the day their friends were killed, and conveyed in a wagon to Mr. Hamblin's house, in the east end of the valley, by John D. Lee and Daniel Tullis, and perhaps others. The following day the children were divided out and placed in different Mormon families in Cedar City, Harmony, Santa Clara, &c., from whence they were collected in pursuance of my directions. A massacre of such unparalleled magnitude on American soil must, sooner or later, demand thorough investigation. I have availed myself, during the last twelve months, of every opportunity to obtain reliable information about the said emigrant company, and the alleged causes of and circumstances which led to their treacherous sacrifice.

Mormons have been accused of aiding the Indians in the commission of this crime. I commenced my inquiries without prejudice or selfish motive, and with the hope that, in the progress of my inquiries, facts would enable me to exculpate all white men from any participation in this tragedy, and saddle the guilt exclusively upon the Indians; but, unfortunately, every step in my inquiries satisfied me that the Indians acted only a secondary part. Conflicting statements were made to me of the behavior of this emigrant company while travelling through the Territory. I have accordingly deemed it a matter of material importance to make a strict inquiry to obtain reliable information on this subject; not that bad conduct on their part could in any degree palliate the enormity of the crime, or be regarded as any extenuation. My object was common justice to the surviving orphans. The result of my inquiries enables me to say that the company conducted themselves with propriety. They were camped several days at Corn creek, Fillmore valley, adjacent to one of our Indian farms.

Persons have informed me that, whilst there encamped, they poisoned a large spring with arsenic and the meat of a dead ox with strichnine. This ox died, unquestionably, from eating a poisonous weed which grows in most of the valleys here. Persons in the southern part of the Territory told me last spring, when on a southern trip, that from fifteen to twenty Pah-vant Indians (of those on Corn Creek farm) died from drinking the water of the poisoned spring and eating of the poisoned meat. Other equally unreasonable stories were told me about these unfortunate people.

That an emigrant company, as respectable as I believe this was, would carry along several pounds of arsenic and strichnine, apparently for no other purpose than to poison cattle and Indians, is too improbable to be true. I cannot learn that the Pah-vants had any difficulty with these people. The massacre took place only about one hundred miles south of Corn creek, and yet not any of those Indians were present. Bad white men have magnified a natural cause to aid them in exciting the southern Indians, hoping that, by so doing, they could be relied upon to exterminate the said company and escape detection themselves. Thus, on the Monday morning subsequent to the Friday, 4th or 5th of September, the day they camped at the spring, the Indians commenced firing upon them, and continued daily until and during the eighth day of their encamping, but without accomplishing much. Several were killed, however, and a few wounded. When the company first apprehended an attack, they formed a corral with their wagons, and filled up with earth to the wagon beds, which made a protecting fort. White men were present and directed the Indians. John D. Lee, of Harmony, told me, in his own house, last April, in presence of two persons, that he was present three successive days during the fight, and was present during the fatal day. The Indians alone made their last attack on the 8th of September. On the 9th, John D. Lee and others, whose names I gave in my letter of the 23d ultimo, displayed a white flag, and approached the corral with two wagons, and had a long interview with the company, and proposed a compromise. What there occurred has not transpired. The emigrant company gave up all their arms, with the expectation that their lives would be spared, and they be conducted back to Panther creek and Cedar city. The old women, children, and wounded were taken in the wagons, and the company proceeded towards Panther creek, when, suddenly, at a signal, the work of death commenced, about one and a half mile from the spring, at a place where there was about an acre of scrub-oak brush. Here not less, I think, than one hundred and fifteen men, women, and children, were slaughtered by white men and Indians. Three men got out of the valley, two of whom, were soon overtaken and killed; the other reached Muddy creek, over fifty miles off, and was overtaken and killed by several Indians and one white man.

Thus terminated the most extensive and atrocious massacre recorded in American history. Whoever may have been the perpetrators of this horrible deed, no doubt exists in my mind that they were influenced chiefly by a determination to acquire wealth by robbery. It is in evidence, from respectable sources, that material changes have taken place in the pecuniary condition of certain individuals suspected of complicity in this affair. It is to be regretted that no well-directed effort has been made to bring the guilty to trial and punishment. I furnished to the proper officials the names of some of the persons who, I had reason to suppose, were instigators and participators in this unparalleled massacre, and also with the names of witnesses.

AFFIDAVIT OF HENRY HIGGINS.

Territory of Utah.

Cedar County ss:

Henry Higgins being sworn says, that he lived in Cedar city, in said Territory, about the month of September, 1857, the time of the massacre at the Mountain Meadows. Some days before the massacre, he saw the train going through towards the city, he being out herding at the time; train going south a few days after, about sundown in the evening, he noticed a company of persons going out of Cedar city, two wagons full, and others on horse-back, about 25 persons in all, all armed with guns. Nothing was said about where they were going, he inquired, but was unable to find out. In the company that started out he recollected the following persons: William Bateman, Egra Curtis, Samuel Pollock, Alexander Loveridge, John M. Higbee, and William Stewart.

Affiant further says, that he saw the same persons return with a lot of wagons and oxen, which were loaded with plunder, there was twelve or fourteen of them, four to five yoke of oxen in each, they were driven to Bishop P. K. Smith's, there unloaded. Some time after the effects were sold at the Tithing office—and further saith not.

JOHN CRADLEBAUGH,

Judge 2d District, U. S.

EXTRACT FROM A LETTER OF WM. H. ROGERS TO THE VALLEY TAN.

“Leaving the commands here (Mountain Meadows) Judge Cradlebaugh and I proceeded forward to Cedar city, where the Judge intended to remain some time, and make a thorough investigation if he could, and the persons engaged in it. Owing to some disadvantage in the location of Cedar city, a large portion of the inhabitants that once dwelt there had moved away, and there was in consequence a good many vacant houses in the place. Judge Cradlebaugh obtained the use of one of these to stay in, and for the purpose of a court room.

As soon as it became known that Judge Cradlebaugh intended holding a court, and investigating the circumstances of the massacre, and that he would have troops to insure protection, and enforce his writs if necessary; several persons visited him at his room at late hours of the night, and informed him of different facts connected with the massacre. All those that called thus, stated that it would be at the risk of their lives if it became known that they communicated anything to him, and they requested the Judge if he met them in daytime, not to recognize them as persons that he had seen before.

One of the men who called thus on Judge Cradlebaugh, confessed that he had been engaged in the massacre, and gave the following account of it.

* * * * *

Such was the substance, if not the exact words of a statement made by a man to Judge Cradlebaugh, in my presence, who confessed that he participated in the horrible events that he related. He also gave Judge Cradlebaugh the names of twenty-five or thirty men living in the region, who assisted in the massacre. He offered to make the same statements in court, if protection was guaranteed to him. He gave as a reason for divulging these facts that they had tormented his mind and conscience since they occurred.

We had been in Ceder city but two days when Capt. Campbell arrived with his command, and informed the Judge that he had received an express from General Johnson to bring back with him all the troops in his command, as the Mormons were assembling in the mountains on the route. Judge Cradlebaugh was left without protection for those who might be called as witnesses, or of arresting any persons who might flee or resist his writs. Without assistance of this kind it was useless to attempt to hold a court, and we accordingly left on the next day with Capt. Campbell's command for Camp Floyd.

WM. H. ROGERS,

Deputy U. S. Marshall, U. T.

THE PARISH MURDER.

Testimony of Mrs. Alvira L. Parish.

Elvira L. Parish being duly sworn, says, that a few days before my husband and son were murdered, Wilber J. Earl and Alex. F. McDonald came to my house about dusk in the evening and took my husband out. My son followed, and McDonald drove him back. Then I went out and crossed the street into my nephew's house, and stood at the open window, the house being an unfinished one, and heard McDonald tell my husband that he could never see his grey horses any more. My husband replied that if he would let him go to Brigham Young, he would bring papers to show that the horses belonged to him and no one else. McDonald said we dont care for Brigham Young, and if you start to see him you will never live to get there. My husband then opened his bosom and told them if they wanted to kill him to do it now. McDonald said we dont want to shed blood now.

On Sunday following, after I heard this conversation, Mr. Parish started with Abraham Durfee from our house about two o'clock in the afternoon, and in the evening Mr. Durfee came back, and took my two sons out; soon after they left the house I heard a gun fire. This was a little after dark, and shortly after that the police came and searched my house for Orrin, and told me that they wanted his body dead or alive. I told them he was not there, but Carnes, the Captain of the Police told them to search the house, and they searched it. I remained in the house all night, much alarmed and very lonesome. I went to the door occasionally and saw some men fixing a wagon, and passing frequently with candles in their hands from John Daily's house to the wagon. I saw the wagon move off in the direction that my sons went. It proved to be the wagon that brought in the dead bodies. G. McKenzie told me that he was ordered by the Bishop to drive the wagon out, but did not know at the time what he was going after, that when they arrived at the place they threw the dead bodies of my husband, my son and Mr. Potter into the wagon like dead hogs, and said: "This is the way the damned apostates go."

The next morning after this, my brother-in-law, Ezra Parish, came to my house and told me that Orrin was at his house guarded by four policemen. He told me to come over, but to be as calm as possible. I went over and found Orrin there in bed guarded by four men. I knew none of the men but William Johnson. I stepped toward the bed to ask my son if he knew where his father was, but Mr. Johnson jerked me away, and said if I wanted to talk I must talk loud. I then asked him loud, if he knew where his father was? He said he had not seen him. Soon after that, my son Albert came and told me that his father and his brother, and Mr. Potter, were all dead in the school house. Soon after that they came and took Orrin over to the school house. I followed, but was so prostrated by the circumstances that I was not able to go alone, but was assisted by my nephew and brother-in-law. When I got to the school house, I heard them ask Orrin if he had been accessory to the murder. He stated on oath that he had not, and that he did not know who did it. Orrin was at this time very much embarrassed. He was discharged after they found that he knew nothing.

After the burial, I was required to pay $48 for funeral expenses before I could get back my husband's watch and other things he had with him. On a second visit to the school house, I noticed that a knife had been drawn through my husband's left hand; the fore finger hung by the skin; his hand and left arm were all cut up with a knife; a large gash in the back of his head. One of his suspenders was cut off; the knife pierced his body, then another wound lower down and more in front. There was forty-eight holes in his coat, all caused by stabs; examined and counted them myself. Mr. Parrish's throat was cut from ear to ear; his watch had saved him one stab, there was the mark of a knife on it. There was four bullet holes in the left side of my son. My husband had a Territorial order in his pocket book when he left home—called for $500; I never got it back; when I got his pocket-book it had a few jewels in it belonging to my sons, a medal, a half dollar, a twenty-five cent piece, the paper containing the conversation my husband and Earl and McDonald was in it, but it was not returned.

* * * * *

Mr. Dibble, who was on the coroner's inquest said, that where he examined the pocket-book on the inquest, he saw no papers of any kind.

I went to Salt Lake City in July, 1857, to see Brigham, in accordance with a promise I had made my husband. Brigham told me he knew nothing of the affair. Springville was fifteen years ahead of him. He would have stopped it had he known anything about it. I asked him about the horses. He said he would do everything he could do to have the horses restored to me—he would write to me after seeing Mr. Bullock and others. I told him Gee had possession of the horses, and that he had said, nothing but an order from Brigham could get them. Brigham's clerk put down in a book what I said. Brigham never wrote to me. I went to see him this winter—he would'n't see me. It was between Christmas and New Years—could'n't see him. I went to Brigham Young's office about 8 o'clock in the morning, and sat there till 4 o'clock in the afternoon. His clerks were present. At 4 o'clock I was told that I could not see Brigham Young that day, but next day to call and see him between 8 and 11 o'clock in the morning. I came next morning and was told I could'n't see him, that he saw nobody. Mr. Sharp, chief the police in Salt Lake City, when I was going out, called me back, and asked me what I would do about it. I told him I did'n't know. I went to John Young's, from there to Mr. Long's, and noticed Mr. Sharp and one of the clerks following me; they called after me; they said I should wait till the soldiers left, and I would get back my horses and four fould with them. It would be best for me to drop it. They told me to go to Bishop Hunter and try to settle the matter. I would not go.

The first day I was at Brigham's office, I was told by the clerk, Brigham Young don't want to see you, such business should be put into the hands of the Bishops—to see Bishop Hancock, Bishop Johnson, and Bishop Roeberry, and they would settle it—That Brigham had told him that he didn't want to see me.

There had been public preaching at Springville, to the effect that no apostates would be allowed to leave, if they did, hog-holes in the fences would be stopped up with them. I heard these sermons. Elder Hyde and President Snow, and others, preached that way. My husband was no believer in the doctrine of killing to "save" as taught by the teachers.

ALVIRA L. PARISH

Sworn to and subscribed before me, this 26th day of March, A. D. 1859.

JOHN CRADLEBAUGH, Judge, &c.

TESTIMONY OF ORRIN E. PARRISH.

Orrin E. Parish, being sworn, says: He was twenty years old last July; lived with his father's family in Springville, in March, 1857. Family consisted of father, mother, and six children; eldest brother, William Beason, aged twenty-two; witness next. Lived in James O'Bannion's house—double house; we lived in one end, O'Bannion in the other. We came here from Council Bluffs.

Father, brother, and Potter were murdered on the evening of the 14th March, 1857. About a week before the murder, Mr. Johnson, Mr. Metcalf, and a person whose name witness does not recollect, came to father's as teachers, and questioned father about his religion, whether he prayed, and what he intended to do; don't recollect all that was said, but they didn't seem pleased with father's answer.

A night or two after, our four horses and carriage were stolen; they were in the stable on the lot where we lived. We found two of the horses before father's death in Kim Bullock's stable in Provo; got them back after father's death from the Bishop. Bullock said they were brought and put in his stable at night, and he did not know who by. Lysander Gee, of Tooele city, has the other horses; saw him driving them last fall in Great Salt Lake city, and riding one of them, and another man the other, in Echo Canyon, five or six days after father's death.

Two or three days before the murder, Wilber J. Earl and Abram F. McDonald came to our house, called father out, and went across the street behind an unfinished house belonging to cousin. Witness started to follow, but was driven back by A. F. McDonald, who said they wanted to talk privately to father. Mother went over into the house, and returned in about ten minutes. Father soon after came in. Father afterwards wrote on a piece of paper what was said to him. Witness thinks it read about as follows: "Abram F. McDonald and Wilber J. Earl says that I (William R. Parish) will never see my grey horses any more, and if I start to the city to see Brigham Young, I will never live to get there." Abraham Durfee was at our house frequently after the 1st of March, and up to the time of the murder he lived half a mile from our house. Pretended to father that he couldn't stand Mormonism any longer, and that he wanted to get out of the country. Durfee and Potter were there most every day. The arrangement was finally made, that father, brother, Durfee, Potter and myself, were to start on Sunday night, the 14th of March, 1857. They talked the matter over, and concluded that it would not be safe to start in the daytime; if we did we would be followed and killed as apostates. It was arranged to go out after dark, and meet about a quarter of a mile south of the city wall, at a corner of the lane fence.

Durfee and Potter were at our house at ten o'clock on the Sunday of the murder. Durfee was there also at two o'clock, at which time he and father left, directing us boys where to meet after dark. Durfee came back before dark, again after dark; last time said father sent word to mother to send us out, whether ready or not. Durfee and brother started; I remained at the door talking to mother a minute or two, then overtook them; we went out through the south gate of the city wall. Two persons followed us on the street; did not talk much. Brother and I carried bundles of provision and ammunition.

Durfee left us at the gate; said he was going home to get his gun; directed us to go to the southwest corner of the city wall; went as directed. Saw no person; heard them inside the wall. Durfee came to us; had his gun; asked brother to go with him to get some things that he said he had hid out during the day; returned to me in ten minutes. Durfee said he could not find the things. While they were absent a gun was fired, apparently about the corner of the lane fence, where we were to meet. When they got back I asked what it meant. Durfee said some Indians might be camped down there; then he said it might be a signal from father or Potter. We then started a southeast course, towards the corner where we were to meet. Crossed the fence one or two hundred yards north into the road. After we got into the road, Durfee called out, "Duff, Duff, Duff," three times. Potter's name was Duff.

We then stopped and looked to the fence on the east side of the road. No one answered. We went on towards the corner; when within fifteen or twenty feet of the corner a person at the corner called out "Durfee" three times. Durfee answered. Immediately a gun or pistol was fired; brother Beason fell, (Beason is brother William's middle name.) I was nearest Durfee; brother farthest away, and ahead of us. Durfee had a blanket and black hat on; had a gun and revolver. Brother had a black hat on. Durfee knew we had no arms. Durfee said, "My God! what does this mean?" Witness was close to him, but stepped away. Durfee drew up his gun and pointed it at witness, and bursted a cap, the gun failing to go off. Witness went further off from Durfee. Another gun was then fired at corner of fence; then two or three other shots were fired; one ball passed through a cartridge box witness had on, (cartridge box shown with a hole in it.)

Witness jumped fence and ran for the city; climbed the wall at a place where it was low, about seven feet high, and was severely injured in getting off it; when he crossed Hobble Creek, heard person behind ask which way he went. Witness ran to his uncle's house; some ten or twelve men were standing in the street to the left. Witness got in so quick they could not catch him. Uncle, aunt, and cousins, at home. Told them that Beason had been shot. Asked uncle to go and see if he was alive. Uncle was afraid to go. Got Robert Brooks to go. Brooks went, returned in a short time—twenty minutes, and said he went to the South city gate, was there met by a lot of men who told him to go back if he wanted to live.

Half an hour after Brooks returned, Wilber J. Earl, H. H. Carnes, Daniel Stanton, Sanford Fuller, Andrew Wiles, and a man by the name of Curtis, came to uncle's; Carnes asked for me, said he wanted me, dead or alive. Witness was sick from hurt in jumping the wall, and had laid down in bed; made me get up to see if I was shot. Told him I was sick; got up, sat in chair; felt my shoulders and arms, and examined me to see if I was shot. Said he had a writ for me, and I must go with him. Aunt said I was sick and not able to go. That no matter; when they took me, she would follow them; and that they could guard me: then a guard was left over me. In the morning, John Daily, William Johnson, and a man I don't recollect, were there as a guard. Ten or eleven o'clock, was taken by John Daily and others to the meeting house. John M. Stuart acted as Justice of the Peace; twenty or thirty men there. Durfee and I were sworn. Durfee was examined first; don't recollect all he said; he had snapped a cap at the enemy. I told them I knew nothing about it more than Durfee had stated; that I saw nobody, but saw something dark toward the corner of the fence. My uncle got a chance to speak to me in the morning, and he told me to say that I knew nothing; said that if they found out that I knew anything, they would kill me. That was the reason I testified that way. They discharged me. The voice I heard at the corner of the fence calling Durfee, was Carne's voice; he has a peculiar voice; I knew it well, and cannot be mistaken. The dead bodies were at the meeting or school when we were sworn. Father laid in the middle—his throat was cut; body was covered up. Brother fell forward, when shot, on his hands; five or six shots fired; four ball holes in brother's coat, entering on one side of the breast, and coming out on the back. (Coat produced and identified.) Never suspected Durfee's treachery until he pointed the gun at me. Heard father say that Durfee's life had been threatened. Eight o'clock in the evening when they were murdered.

Judge, &c.

AFFIDAVIT OF JOSEPH BARTHOLOMEW.

TERRITORY OF UTAH, }
 Utah County. } ss:

Joseph Bartholomew of Springville, in the county of Utah aforesaid, being duly sworn, deposes and says:

Duff Potter came to me and notified me to attend a meeting at Bishop Johnson's about the 1st of March, 1857.

In pursuance of that notice we met at Bishop Johnson's in a private council meeting. I do not recollect what was done at this first meeting; there was merely some talk about persons leaving and matters and things connected therewith, of which I do not remember the particulars. In about a week after that they met again, and at that meeting Potter and Durfee were "dropped off" and selected for the purpose of finding out what was going on.

At the meeting the conversation was about the Parrishes, and about persons at the Indian farm. The meeting was called to enter into arrangements to find out what these persons expected to do. This is what I understood was the purpose of these two meetings. I did not attend any meetings after this. At this meeting it was not known what the Parrishes intended to do, and nothing was decided as in regard to them.

Bishop Johnson made a remark, however, that some of us would yet "see the red stuff run." He said he had a letter, and the remark was made by some one that "dead men tell no tales." I do not know whether any other meetings were held or not.

The same night that the Parrishes were killed, at about nine o'clock, I was notified by Carnes to go home and get my gun. I asked him what was up. He said there was enough up. I was just returning from a public meeting which had been held that night; they did not tell me what they wanted with me. Bishop Johnson, Lorenzo Johnson, A. F. McDonald, Mayor; John M. Stewart, Justice of the Peace; Wilber J. Earl, Alderman, now captain of police; Andrew Wiles, William Bird, Lorin Roundy, Simmons Curtis, Abraham Durfee, Duff Potter and myself, were at the council meetings, and other persons I do not remember the name of. There were at least fifteen present.

I went and got my gun and came back, and was told to take my post and watch west of Parrish's house, three rods; I was told to stay there and watch if Orrin Parrish came back. I stayed there some 10 or 15 minutes, when I was notified to repair to the school house; I don't remember who notified me.

When I got there, there was a company formed there with a wagon and team. We were ordered to march south, down the lane, formed as a guard in front of the team; I did not know at that time for what purpose. When we got out at the south gate I learned then what was up. When we reached the bodies we were formed into two companies, one to go to the south-east and one to the west; I went to the west side of the street from where the bodies lay. They were on the east side and we were on the west side. The street is eight rods wide. The companies were divided before we came to the bodies. There were two persons beside myself in the company I was with, and about three in the other. There were some ten or fifteen altogether that went out. Of these I remember the following: A. F. McDonald, John M. Stewart, Philio Dibbee, George McKenzie went as teamster; Davis Clark, Simmons Curtis, John Daley, Moses Daley, jr., and John Curtis. Carnes, the Captain of police, called us together, and told us to start out.

While I and the two with me were standing as guard, the others went and found the bodies. When the bodies were found we were called together, and I saw the bodies of Potter and Wm. Parrish lying side by side.

The body of Beason Parrish was lying about fifty yards to the south east of the other bodies, from the corner of the fence.

The bodies were put into the wagon and taken to the school house. The bodies were searched and a note taken of the effects found on the bodies, the pocket-books, knives, &c.

A guard was put around the school house that night. I was called to take charge of the house, and to wash the bodies and lay them out. Edward Hall and Thomas Cordingly (since dead) assisted me.

Old man Parrish was cut all over with knife wounds. His throat was cut in the left side. He was cut at least fifteen times in the back, in front, on the arms, the hands, in fact all over.

Potter was shot with three balls in his right breast below the nipple, probably with a shot gun; there were no knife marks about Potter.

Beason Parrish was shot through the left arm with four balls, passing through the arm and coming out near the middle of his back. They may have entered at his back and come out through the arm; they were nearer together in his back than in front.

I was invited by Sanford Fuller to go and participate in the killing of Henry Forbes. He told me there was such a thing in contemplation, and wanted me to go with him which I declined doing.

About two days after that Wilber J. Earl spoke to me, and told me that the job which they contemplated was done, and if I had a went he would not have had it to do. He charged me not to tell it, and I am now under the threats of death for doing so. I never saw the body. Some four or five days after, Coles told me that the Indians had found the body some where between there and Provo.

There has been several attempts to put me out of the way. Last fall was a year ago, I was called upon to go with four men up the Kanyon to look for some valley. When we got to camp one of the men asked me to go with him to hunt bears. Their plan was for him to lead me round to a place where the others would kill me and say it was the Indians.

As I went out, however, I could see their manouevrings, and I suspected something; so when we got on a piece I left him, and going another course returned to camp. When I got there I found the man with whom I had started, and the others were all gone. When the other men came back they saddled up their horses, and went to a more convenient camp. Abraham Durfee, Wilber J. Earl, Nelson Spafferd and Selin Curtis were with me.

In the night, after dark, they tied my horse in an opening, where the light of the fire would shine on him. When we went to get our horses, they said they would take their guns. I said I would take my gun too, and went out, but took care to keep out of the light of the fire. I found my horse tied, but got him loose without getting into the fire-light. They then wanted me to come where they were, and that would have brought me into the light, but I refused, and tied him elsewhere. The guards were arranged so that Spafford and I were on the first guard. I watched them all very narrowly, and satisfied myself from their movements that they had determined to kill me; so, making some excuse, I went out with my gun and ran off. After traveling some time I laid down and slept; the next day I traveled through the brush as much as possible. Towards evening, however, I was headed by four men on foot, and chased by them until dark. The next morning I found some men getting wood, and came home with them. When I got back I met Earl and the Bishop, and they told me I was crazy—that nothing of the sort was thought of.

It all passed off well enough until two weeks ago; the second time that Marshal Dotson came to my house; then Andrew Wiles and Sanford Fuller came to me and told me I must go into the mountains. I started from Oliver McBride's. The two McBride boys, (Oliver and Harlin,) the two Curtis' (Uriah and Selie,) William McBride and William Johnson, were at the house. Two of them followed me until I went up the mountain about eighty rods; I then stepped to one side into a little kind of a kanyon, and then got away up among the rocks till they passed by and lost me; I then came down the mountain again, and went about half a mile north and went up Rock kanyon.

This was on Friday night; on Sunday night I came into town and went to Uriah Curtis'; there they notified me again that I must go to Wilber J. Earl and Abraham Durfee. I was notified by William Johnson, the Marshal by Uriah Curtis, Harlin McBride and William Bird. We then proceeded—Oliver and Harlin McBride and myself—out to where Earl and Durfee were, up Hobble Creek a piece. As soon as we got there William Bird and U. Curtis came to us with an express that we must go to the city. They would tell who the counsel was from, but said it was 'counsel; and we were not to be seen by any living being, but were to travel at night and lay by in the day time and keep to the mountains.

We started and traveled along the mountain, and camped the first morning between Brattle creek and the mouth of Provo kanyon, up in a little kanyon. The next night we crossed over the mountain, near Mountainville, and camped the next day at Dry creek, in Salt Lake valley. There Wilber J. Earl began to get uneasy about noon, and wished to go on. Durfee and I opposed it, but Earl would go on, and we finally consented; then, instead of obeying what Durfee and I had understood as counsel, to keep out of sight of men, he took a straight course for Cottonwood Fort. When we got within about half a mile of the fort, Earl took off his pistol belt and buckled it on again so that his pistol would be right in front, and then wanted us to go up in the willows above the fort and wait there till night. It had been snowing all the time since we started, and was still snowing.

Durfee and I believed that there was a plan laid to kill us right there, and we would not go, but determined to go past the fort. When I got opposite the fort I stopped and asked them whether they intended to kill and butcher me, and told them that I believed that was their intention. They both denied it positively, and Earl said that I must be crazy again. About a mile past Cottonwood Fort a man passed us riding at full speed on horseback; he rode at full speed until he got out of sight. When he passed us he did not look at us or notice us at all.

At Big Cottonwood we were tired of carrying our blankets, which were wet and heavy, and left them at a blacksmith's shop. We went on to Gardner's mill, and from there we turned right west through the willow patches. Earl wanted to go that way, and would go no other. We went across until we came to a dam to turn water into a mill race, and here saw a man sitting down; and when he saw us coming he raised up, and then slipped down again behind the dam out of sight; as he raised up we saw the breech of a gun. Abraham Durfee then stopped and said to Earl, "Wilber Earl, have you anything against me?" Wilber said he had not, and raised his hand and said he had nothing against either of us, and that there was nothing against either of us. He seemed to become very much excited. We turned and went back a piece and crossed the race, and went on and struck into the first street east of the state road. We then went up that street into town.

At the corners of the first cross street there were men posted at each corner. There Wilber J. Earl made a sign with his hand for them to go round us. They then started one way and we went another around the corner. We would not go the way Earl wanted us to go, but kept him with us. At the next corner we turned north, and then at the next corner two men were stationed in the same manner as at the first corner, which we supposed were the same two we had met before. Here Earl put his hand to his pistol, and then made a motion by putting his hand to his forehead. One of the men whistled. We went up this street until we got to Brigham's house, and then turned west to the council house corner. Here we stopped right in the street, Durfee saying that he wanted to go to Stringham's. We talked about it, and Earl seemed willing to have us go. He said he did not want me to go with him with the feeling which I had towards him. Durfee and me then started towards Kinkead's. Wilber J. Earl started on west down the street. A man followed after him, and when we saw him last there were three men talking with him. We went to Kinkead's store, and told Mr. Kinkead about our case, and told him we wanted protection until morning. He took us over to the Secretary's. Mr. Kinkead and his clerk went there with us. We claimed the Secretary's protection.

There was a gun fired close to us when we entered the city. I have heard it said that apostates running off would never get farther than Muddy creek.

I do not think that the killing of Potter was intentional, but that he was killed through mistake. He was the one who notified me, and was a leading man.

JOHN CRADLEBAUGH,

Judge 2d Judicial District.

Bartholomew was afterwards examined as a witness, and made the same statements, and in addition said:

"Durfee and Potter were set off by council meeting to watch Parrish's. Saw John Daley about the public meeting on the Sunday night of the murder; he did not go into the house. Council meetings were held in the upper room of Bishop Johnson's house; confident he saw McDonald there. Brother Carnes called on witness, and ordered him to get his gun on the night of the murder. Carnes called out the company; does not know that any person was sworn when we took up the bodies."

THE FARCE OF A COURT OF INQUIRY.

The following is the examination referred to by Orrin E. Parrish in his testimony; it is copied from a loose sheet of paper in the docket of John M. Stuart, and must satisfy any reasonable person that the anxiety manifested by the diligent police in searching for Orrin—placing a guard over him when injured and scarcely able to get out of bed; treating him as a criminal in custody; not allowing even his mother to speak to him unless she spoke loud; taking him to the school house as a prisoner then swearing him and Durfee;—was for no other purpose than to find out if he could identify any of the murderers. If he had said he knew any of them, no doubt he would soon after have been killed by assassins to the jurors unknown.

REPORT OF THE COURT OF INQUIRY HELD IN THE SCHOOL HOUSE, SPRINGVILLE, MARCH 16th, 1857.

Said court was held to inquire into the reasons Abram Durfee and Orrin Parrish should be held in custody of the police.

H. H. Carnes Captain of the police was called, and stated that Cyrus Sandford, city Marshal, delivered into his custody Abram Durfee, who stated "that he had reason to suppose that certain men had been murdered south of the city, and as he also said that the young man Parrish was in company with him and believed he had also come into the city." I directed his arrest, that he also might be in safe keeping until proper investigation could be made.

Abram Durfee being sworn stated, that it had been arranged between myself and G. Potter and the Parrishes, that they would leave the country—that he in company with the two sons of Wm. Parrish left the city by the west gate and proceeded to the southwest corner of the fort wall; he had arranged to meet with Potter and Parrish at the corner of Childs field, they were to go on before. When we reached the corner of the wall we heard a gun fired. I thought it might be Potter and Parrish firing a gun off to let us know their whereabouts. We went on, and when we got pretty near the corner of the field, I spoke and called Potter, but no one answered. I spoke again and some one spoke; I dont know whether it was Potter or not. Just then a gun fired, and the boy Parish fell on my right. I run; then another gun fired. I then heard a gun fire the third time. There must have been more than one gun fired from the reports. I did not see Parrish or Potter; I dont know whether they were there or not. I did not see anybody, only the two boys, this one that is here and the one that fell; I could not have seen anybody ten feet off, it was so dark. A ball passed just in front of me, at the first time I saw the boy fall. I ran from the spot when I heard the fire and saw the boy fall; this was about 7 o'clock in the evening.

Orrin Parrish, sworn, says he went out with his brother, as Durfee had stated. On the first gun my brother fell; there were four or five guns fired after. I dont know whether I saw any person. I saw something black; I ran off after the first fire I saw my brother fall.

The court decided that there was no just cause to hold the men in custody any longer and that they be released.

Prisoners discharged.

P. S. Durfee also said that he had no idea of any one being aware of their intention to leave the place.

The decision or verdict of the jury was as follows: "The jurors called to examine the bodies of Wm. B. Parrish, Beason Parrish, and Gardner G. Potter, find that the above named bodies all came to their death by the hands of assassins to the jurors unknown.

The reader should observe carefully the foregoing documents and consider the same in connexion with the testimony of Bartholomew and Durfee. Several of these persons were on the Grand Jury at Provo. The Mormon county court in Utah having the selecting of the Grand and trial jurors for the Federal courts. It will also be observed, that many of them take conspicuous parts in the Bishop council meetings, at Bishop Johnson's, which determined on killing the Parishes, for which, also see the affidavits of Durfee and Bartholomew.

AFFIDAVIT OF ZEPHANIAH J. WARREN.

TERRITORY OF UTAH, }
Provo City, Utah County, } ss:
Second Judicial District. }

Zephaniah J. Warren being duly sworn, says as follows: I am fifty-seven years old, I came to Utah in the year A. D. 1852. I came from Iowa to this Territory; I settled in the town of Springville, Utah county, when I came into this valley, and have resided there ever since, with the exception of about seven months absence in California, in the years 1856 and 1857. I reside in Springville now. On my return home from California in the Spring of 1857, I heard of the murder of the two Parrishes and Potter; the day I came to Springville I saw the place where they were murdered. Seeing the place and the appearance of blood, I became somewhat excited and spoke very reproachfully of the leading men of Springville; however, I tried to reconcile my mind enough to stay until I could dispose of my property, and get away with my family.

I did not say much to anybody, unless I was interrogated, during the whole season. I heard of many threats being thrown out against me in the meeting-house by the overseers, but I did not use much caution. I was thrown off my guard by supposing that they dare not touch me. In the latter part of August, I was very feeble from a severe cold, so that I was confined to my house, and in bed much of the time.

On the night of the 31st August, 1857, I arose from my bed and applied some medicine to my eyes which occasioned great pain. During the time a person knocked at my door; I bade him come in. Two men came in—William Johnson and Oliver McBride. They asked me if Mr. Warren was at home, I told them I was the man, but was very feeble. They told me brother Earl wished to see me a few minutes just here. I said I would not go, but would try to see him in the morning, if I was able. They said they were policemen, and brother Earl told them, if I did not come willingly, they must bring me by force. I insisted they should wait until my son came home, as I did not want to go alone. They said they would not wait and that I must and should go immediately. I told them I would go—that I was not conscious of any crime, and was not afraid to go; and if it was not far I would do my best. I went out into the street in company with these two men. I found six others standing in the street. Their names were Wilber J. Earl, Sanford Fuller, Abraham Durfee, John Curtis, Lehi Curtis, and Simmons P. Curtis. They were all armed with pistols, knives, and guns. Earl told me to be still and go with them out of the city gate. I told them I would not go one step without the knowledge of the public. Earl seized me by the throat, saying “Damn your old heart, if you speak another loud word (applying his knife to my throat) I will cut your throat on the spot.” They then, Johnson and Earl took me by force and dragged me on the ground most of the time, for about sixty rods, through the gate; they then suddenly stopped, and some one said “there is some one coming; damn him! stop him, stop him!” Two ran back, and the others then threw me into a fence ditch. Earl then seized me by the throat saying, “you damned old American, you will never write or talk any more about people that have been murdered.” Then all but one left me, and held a private conversation on the other side of the road, lasting perhaps an hour; then six of them came back and Earl said, “we have concluded to let you live a few days, if you will now swear before us that you will never divulge what has been done to you to-night to any person, and go within a day or two and settle up your tithing, as all men in these valleys have got to be tithed. We have declared war against the whole world, and at any time we can put you aside very easy. I did promise that I would go and settle my tithing, that they required. Then they all addressed me, one by one, and advised me to make friends with the Mormons and never to write any more or try to make myself as one of the Gentiles. They then left me. A short time after I went to the Bishop and tried to settle my tithing. The Bishop became so much enraged at my talking to him, that I could not settle at that time, and I never tried again until the spring of 1858; the Bishop then appeared in a very good humor and soon told me what my tithing was. He did not take my note. Suppose he forgot it. Since that time, which was about the time the army came in, he always appeared very hostile—sending me word to come and settle up my tithings. I always told the men he sent that I never would settle the tithing; that I had been forced by duress to say that I would, in order to save my life.

Alva A. Warren being duly sworn, says as follows: I am twenty-two years old; I am the son of Zephaniah J. Warren, I came to Springville with my father in 1852, and have resided in Springville ever since, and reside there now. On the night of the 31st of August, 1857, I came up to my father's house, just as two men, William Johnson and Oliver McBride, were bringing my father out of the house. My father asked me to go with him. I said I would. The two men said, "You need not go—we are not going to hurt him." I went till I came to the other six men, and then William Johnson said: "You can't go any further—We are not going to hurt him." I stopped and they went on till they got opposite to Earl's house, and I heard a noise that I thought was father's voice, and I went on, down to where they were, and Lellie Curtis ordered me to be taken back, and John Curtis came and took me back about one hundred and fifty yards from where they were then, and John Curtis and myself staid there till they came back. Then father and I went home, and William Johnson and Oliver McBride came and called for me, and I went up with them to Earl's house, and they made me promise never to say anything about it.

AFFIDAVIT OF JAMES W. WEBB.

James Wesley Webb, being sworn states: I lived at Springville in 1857. I lived there when the Parishes and Potter were killed. The morning after they were killed Daniel Stanton came to me to get me to make a coffin for Gardner Potter. About three months after making the coffin for Potter I applied to the city council of Springville for pay for it while the council was in session. Wilber J. Earl, a member of the council, took me out of the house, and remarked that I ought not to have said anything about the coffin or Potter then, that it always made McDonald feel bad. He repeated this remark to me two or three times, as if to impress it strongly on my mind, and to caution me against saying anything again about Potter in the presence of McDonald. Alexander F. McDonald was present in the council when I applied for pay for making the coffin for Potter. I do not know whether he was a member of the council or not. Alex. F. McDonald has been Mayor of Springville, and I think that he was when the Parishes and Potter were killed, though I will not be positive about this.

CONFESSION OF ABRAHAM DURFEE.

TERRITORY OF UTAH,
 2d Judicial District. }
 Provo City, Utah County. }

Abraham Durfee, of his own free will and accord, and without being influenced by any promise of any kind, by any person whatever, or of the hope thereof, now, this first day of April, A. D. 1859, comes before Judge Cradleigh, and makes the following confession, viz :

I am thirty-four years old. I have resided in Springville, Utah county, U. T., since the spring of 1851. I came from Iowa in 1850. In Springville I was farming part of the time, and part of the time attending a saw mill and working at millwrighting.

I was notified of a council by Wilber J. Earl in the month of January, 1857; he told me he wanted me to come to the Bishop's house that evening, and he said there would be others there at the room. I went, and there were a number of persons in the room; it was in the upper room in the Bishop's dwelling house, in Bishop Aaron Johnson's house. The Bishop was there, A. F. McDonald, Wilber J. Earl, Abraham Durfee, Andrew Wiles, and Lorenzo Johnson, William Bird, and Gardner G. Potter and Joseph Bartholomew, Simmons Curtis and Lorin Roundy were there, and there were a number of others whose names I have forgotten, I do not know what the meeting had been called for; there were matters talked of concerning people going away. Some individuals were mentioned by the Bishop; he stated that he had instructions in regard to them. The Bishop said he had received a letter, which he had in his hand; he said that he supposed that was sufficient for us to know; that he did not wish that any inquiry should go any further back than to himself. He stated that there were some individuals at the Indian farm who were about to leave; he said he wanted them watched, and wanted some one to see when they would leave; he said there was word that they were going to steal some horses, and then going to leave the Territory. That was about all I recollect that transpired that night. The understanding was that the persons there were to watch generally for persons going away,

There was another meeting in the neighborhood of a week, or longer—can't say exactly. I was notified by some person to attend that meeting; that meeting was held at the same place, in the room. It was some three weeks before the Parrishes and Potter was killed. The same persons were at this meeting that were at the first I have spoken of. N. T. Guyman was at this meeting; Bishop Johnson presided. There was something mentioned at this meeting about the Parrishes—that they were going to leave the Territory. The Bishop said there were some demands against them, for debts that they were owing; he did not state the debts. It was mentioned, either by the Bishop or McDonald, I don't recollect which, to have some one to find out when the Parrishes were going to start; they nominated or named persons to know when the Parrishes were going to leave. My name (Abraham Durfee) was mentioned, and I objected to it; then they mentioned Potter's name; and then the Bishop decided that both Potter and myself should try and learn when the Parrishes were going to leave the Territory. The Bishop said he did not wish any one to decline when he was called upon. I then told the Bishop I would do the best I knew how, and Potter assented to the same; I can't recollect that Potter made any reply.

There was considerable talk about other matters, but I can't recollect what it was. I saw Potter several times through the course of the week following. I talked with Parrish that week, and with several others who were going away, and I went—I think it was that week—and did some work for him. Parrish's horses were not mentioned in the meetings I have named.

In the course of that week Parrish's horses were taken, and Parrish came over to see me in the morning; he told me that they had taken all his horses; he wished me to help him hunt them up. I went with him to his house; we went from there to John M. Stewart's, the justice of the peace; he got out a search warrant, and went to find the constable, Cyrus Sandford. He was not at home, and I went back to the justice's with Parrish to get deputized to serve the warrant, and the justice refused to do it. Parrish and I went back to Parrish's house, and Potter came up to Parrish's, and Potter took the papers—I mean the warrant; then Parrish and Potter started for Provo.

That is about all that transpired before the next meeting that was held, the evening that Potter returned from Provo, having gone there after the horses, but returned without them. I don't think I was at this third meeting. Potter told me that he went to the meeting after he returned from Provo. He told the meeting that he had found one span of the horses. I asked him what they said about the taking of the horses; he said that the Bishop told him that Parrish or his son was owing Bullock something in regard to an order that Parrish's son had traded to Bullock, and that he (the Bishop) wanted those horses placed where they belonged to answer the demand.

That, evening, at that meeting, Wilber J. Earl and A. F. McDonald were appointed to go and tell Parrish that he should not receive those horses; this was told me by Potter. Parrish the next day told me that he had given up all hope of getting his horses, that they were gone. Parrish told me that he had seen the Bishop and he had agreed to have the horses that had been found at Bullock's in Provo, brought back and put into the custody of Cyrus Sandford, the constable. Parrish, after this had transpired in regard to the horses, proposed leaving right away; he wanted to know if Potter and I would go with him. I told him I would. Potter said he would go too. Parrish made the arrangements to start, I think it was the Saturday before the murder, I cannot recollect the day exactly; Potter told me before this, a day or two, that they arrived to bring them the Parrishes back, if they started, and I went to Parrishes the next Sunday morning and they had not gone yet. Parrish told me then that he had expected to have started before, but the police watched the house so closely that he could not go out of doors. Parrish said he wanted to go that day, or that evening; but he said he could not get his things out so as to start in the day time. Potter came into Parrish while we were talking, and he proposed that he would take Parrish's things out. Parrish got some things for Potter to take with him, some gloves, bridle, a gun, some tape, and some things which I don't recollect. Parrish took the gun apart and gave it to Potter, and Potter said he would take care of them, and bring them to him.

Parrish proposed that he would start out in the daytime, on account of the police and he wanted me to go with him; we started off together, and when we got outside of the house I asked him if he was going to take his gun. He said he would like to have his gun, that he had given Potter one, and he had another one in the house, and he sent me back to the house to get the gun, and then we started off together; we went up the street, east to the edge of the city, and there turned south and went to the east gate. After passing through the gate we went south and crossed Hobbler Creek, till we came to Dry Creek. Parrish stopped then and said he would stay there, and asked me to go back and bring the boys Orrin and Beason, out to him. They were to meet on the State road near the corner of the fence, they were to meet there after dark.

This was a little while before sundown, and I went back to Parrish's house and told the boys that their father said he wanted them to come to him as soon as they got ready. Potter, while I was there, came to the house or yard, and wanted to know of me which way we were going, that he wanted to carry the things which had been given to him by Parrish. Potter said that he expected Parrish and his boys would be brought back. I told Potter that we were going south to come on the state road south of the field. Potter then started off, and I went into Parrish's house. The boys, Beason and Orrin got their things and we started and went south until we came to Centre street, then we turned west and passed through the west gate, and then turned south until we came to the first corner of the city. We stopped then for a few minutes to look for some things that I had left there, and my gun. While we were there we heard a gun fired; the boys asked what the gun was fired for, I told them I thought it was Potter or their father, who was waiting for them; and the boys said then we had better go on. We started and went a south-east course across the field till we came to the state road. We got into the state road and traveled south, and when we came to Dry Creek or Dry Hollow, I spoke for Potter. I called Duff! and no one answered. We traveled on until we came near the corner, and I called Duff again, I think twice. I heard some one speak, but I could not tell by the voice who it was,—it was a very low sound. Just as the person spoke, there was a gun fired near the corner of the fence. The ball hit Beason Parrish. I and the two Parrish boys were walking abreast, I was near the fence, and Orrin was next to me, and Beason was outside near the middle of the wagon track. Beason was west of myself and Orrin, and the shot came from the south-east. The shot struck Beason and he fell. I sprang back to the right and Orrin passed behind me. I spoke out at the time but I don't recollect the words I said. Beason made some noise after he fell. Then they fired again from the fence, and I started west into the hollow where it crosses the street. Orrin started back north. While I was in the hollow I saw some one who started after Orrin. This person sprang from the fence just as I was going to the hollow. As he came into the street partly on the run, he shot; from the flash of the gun it appeared to be pointed north. This person called me. He said: "Durfee, you need not be afraid, it was all right." He started then right on towards the city. I got over the fence into the same field. We came out and I went back north towards the city. I went into the city through the south gate. After I got into the city this man that I saw in the road with the gun, came to me and said that he had done the job; he said that I need not be afraid of him, because he said he would not hurt me. This man was William Bird. I went on until I came to the bridge, and met Cyrus Sandford and told him there had been some shooting; that I believed Beason was shot. Sandford then took me into custody, and took me to the Bishop's yard, and called for the Captain of the police, M. Carnes, and delivered me into his charge, and I remained there till about eleven o'clock at night.

William Bird after I left him went right into the Bishop's house. Bird's cloths were somewhat bloody. I don't know what went on the balance of the evening. Bird washed the blood off his clothes, and he and Wilber Earl went away soon together, from the Bishop's. I saw the blood on Bird's clothes. William Bird told me a short time afterwards, that he was called on by Potter to go out there with him, and to do this deed that had been committed; he did not tell me who was with him but Potter and himself.

Sanford Fuller a month or two after, told me he had been on to go, but did not go. He said Potter had borrowed his gun to go with Bird—told me that after he went out with Potter, that Potter went and found Parrish, and that they came down to the corner together, and that he, Bird, was lying in the corner of the fence. He, Bird, said he shot Potter, as Parrish and Potter walked along the fence, supposing him to be Parrish:—that after he, Bird, had shot, he got up and stepped out to where Parrish stood, and Parrish spoke and wanted to know if it was he that had shot. He said that Parrish had his gun in his hand and laid it down, and they, Parrish and Bird, clinched together. As they clinched, Bird drew his knife, and worked the best he could in stabbing Parrish. Bird said, after Parrish was down he gave him a lick which cut his throat. He never said anything about any other person's being there, helping him. Bird said, after he got through with the old man, he took Potter's gun and his own, and got into the corner of the fence again, to be ready for us. He said he laid there till we came up—the two Parrish boys and myself. Then he said he fired and he saw one fall; he said he was afraid the one he had shot would run off and he fired at him again.

When Orrin and I started, he said he came out from the fence and shot at Orrin; he said he ran me, or he supposed it was me, when I ran into the hollow. He asked me if I heard him call for me. I told him I did. He wanted to know why I did not come to him. I told him that I did not like to, that I did not know what it meant in regard to their shooting.

The next morning after the murder I heard Bishop Johnson and Bird talking together, and he blamed Bird and Potter for not going further away with them.

The Bishop said he wanted I should be satisfied about the affair, and not tell who was in it,—that if I did, they would serve me in the same way. I did not know that the Parrishes were to be killed. I supposed from what Potter told me that they were to be brought back. In the second meeting which I attended Bishop Johnson said there were some of them that would see the blood run. It was William Bird that called me Durfee. Bishop Johnson, some two or three days before this murder, told me to take a gun out with me.

The young Parrishes had no gun.

About three weeks or a month after the Parrishes were killed, Wilber J. Earl told me he guessed the folks now would think he was a true prophet. I had some idea of leaving, but I did not expect to leave with the Parrishes. My object in going out with the Parrishes was to get them clear of the police, out of the city. When I was put in Carnes' custody on the night of the murder, Carnes called on Ogius Strong to keep me until Carnes got some other person to take charge of me. Carnes left me and went off about other matters.

The Parrish boys said they took the bridle and gloves and things to trade off on the road for provisions.

The next morning when the hearing of myself and Orrin Parrish was before John M. Stewart, I knew that Bird was the man, but I was afraid to state it. Bishop Johnson told me that morning what evidence I should give; and he said if I told what I learned that night, they would send me the same way; I stated to the justice what the Bishop told me to say.

Thomas O'Bannion, being duly sworn, deposes and says: I lived in a room adjoining the Parrishes. Parrish didn't keep much of a store, but sold things to persons coming there. Horses and carriage were taken a few days before the murder; got two of the horses back. Parrish told me three or four days before the murder that he had had a terrible dream, and should be murdered in his own house if he did not leave soon; wrote on a paper that his life had been threatened by Earl and McDonald. One the night of the murder several persons came in front of Parrishes; some went in. I heard Carnes ask for Orrin; he said he had a writ for him. They afterwards came into my house and asked for Parrish; I asked which Parrish; Carnes replied, "any Parrish." They then searched my house and granary. H. H. Carnes, Lehi Curtis, Moses Daley, Sanford Fuller, Richard Bird, Henry Rollins and William Johnson were there. Carnes said they must make a clean sweep or search of it; said he always did what he undertook. My best recollection is that the words used were, a clean sweep of it. Did not hear of the murder until the next evening. Went out of town to work in the morning. Didn't say why they wanted Parrish. Curtis and Fuller appeared excited when they were making the search; when they opened my granary door Fuller cocked his gun.

Moses Daley came to me a few days before the murder, and told me to tell Parrish if he did not settle that matter between Beason and Bullock his blood would pay the debt. And further deponent saith not.

— Phillips, being duly sworn, deposes and says: I live in Provo. On the Sunday night of the murder I was at a meeting in the street in Provo. President Snow, President of this State, and others, preached from a wagon. Their preaching about that time was pretty much about apostates and persons going to leave the Territory, and how they would be disposed of. After the meeting Pres. Snow inquired if there was anybody going to Springville that day. A man by the name of Nethercot said he was going. Nethercot went up, and Snow handed him a letter, and told him he wanted it to be de-

MURDER OF HENRY JONES AND HIS MOTHER.

Affidavit of Nathaniel Case.

TERRITORY OF UTAH, }
Cedar County. } ss.

Nathaniel Case, being sworn, says: That he has resided in the Territory of Utah since the year 1850. Lived with Bishop Hancock, (Charles Hancock,) in the town of Payson, at the time Henry Jones and his mother were murdered, about the 13th of April, 1858. The night prior to the murder a secret council meeting was held in the upper chamber of Bishop Hancock's house; saw Charles Hancock, George W. Hancock, Daniel Rawson, James Bracken, George Patten and Price Nelson go into that meeting that night. Meetings had been held pretty regularly for three weeks before the last one at the same place. I was not in any of the meetings; I boarded at the Bishop's. About eight o'clock in the evening of the murder the company gathered at Bishop Hancock's; the same persons I have named above were in the company. They said they were going to guard a corral, where Henry Jones was going to come that night and steal horses; they had guns.

I had a good Minie rifle, and Bishop Hancock wanted to borrow it; I refused to lend it to him. The above persons all went away together; I don't know what time they got back. Next morning I heard that Henry Jones and his mother had been killed. I went down to the dug-out where they lived when the sun was about an hour high. The old woman was lying on the ground in the dug-out on a little straw in the clothes in which she was killed; she had a bullet hole through her head, entering near the center of the forehead. In about fifteen or twenty minutes Henry Jones was brought there and laid by her side; they then threw some old bed-clothes over them, and an old feather bed, and then pulled the dug-out on top of them. The dug-out was built on level ground—a hole about twelve feet square dug to the depth of five feet, a ridge pole running from the centre, back, three feet above the level of the ground; small poles are then laid up close together, running from the sides up on to the ridge pole, so that the dirt won't fall through. The dirt taken out of the hole is thrown back on to the poles for a roof, and steps cut down into the end like cellar steps for entrance. There are a great many such houses occupied by poor people in this county who are not able to build houses, and who never will while they stay here.

The next Sunday after the murder, in a church meeting in Payson, Charles Hancock, the Bishop, said; as to the killing of Jones and his mother, he cared nothing about it, and it would have been done in daylight if circumstances would have permitted it. This was said from the stand; there were one hundred and fifty or two hundred persons present. He gave no reason for killing them. And further saith not.

Andrew J. Moore being duly sworn, says as follows: I live in Pondtown, in Utah Co.; I had lived there only a few days, and sometime in the night in the month of April, 1858, I cannot recollect the day of the month, there was an alarm raised in the night between 12 and 2 o'clock. Heard the alarm to raise the Fort; I jumped up and run out without dressing. I saw nothing and went back into the house to dress myself. I thought at the time it was a break of the Indians. After dressing I went out again and Henry Jones had just come in, and I went to where the people had gathered, and the persons, two or three men, strangers to me, were just taking Henry Jones out of the fort. I did not go outside of the fort, which is now called Pondtown, until the next morning, and then I saw Henry Jones lying dead in the middle of the road about eighty rods west from the fort. The sun was then about an hour high. About ten or fifteen minutes after the persons left the fort with Henry Jones, I heard the report of a gun, I think I heard four reports inside of two minutes. The reports were in the direction that Jones was found, and appeared to have been fired about where the dead body was found. I saw three bullet holes in the body of Jones, two of them were in his side and one of them in his head. The report was that the persons who took Jones out of the fort came from the town of Payson, which is about three miles in a westerly direction from Pondtown. I was not acquainted in Payson; I had gone from Provo to live at Pondtown shortly before that. I do not know anything about the mother of Henry Jones and I do not know anything about the burial of Jones; I never heard of any inquest being held on the body of Jones.

Thomas Hollingshead being duly sworn, says: I reside in Pondtown, Utah County; was in Pondtown the time Henry Jones was murdered. In the night, between midnight and daylight, a year ago in the coming April, we were alarmed; we supposed the Indians had made an attack upon the outposts of the town. We, that is, affiant and his son, and others jumped up and ran out; directly we heard the cry of murder; when we got out into the yard the man came up and said they were after him to kill him; said, where shall I go? where shall I hide from them? About this time his pursuers came up. He then ran there, and made a bolt into a house of Mr. Lyeurgus Wilson, jumping over a bed where a woman was lying, on the floor, and tried to secrete himself in the House. Wilson brought him out of the house; the leading man of the pursuers said "lay hold of that man!"—said to be a constable from Payson; they called him George. I have since seen him; it is George W. Hancock; he told them to disarm Jones, Jones had a pistol and knife but did not offer to use them. He was disarmed—there was no charge in the pistol.

I noticed blood running from his arm; he said they had shot him in the pursuit. The ball went through his arm below the elbow; one or two persons came up with George; I never heard who they were, it was kept dark—nothing said about it.

Some one spoke and wanted to know what they were going to do with the man. George said, I know what I am going to do with him. Some one said this horse stealing has got to be stopped. They passed out in the direction of Payson. Payson is distant two miles.

We went into the house and I was talking the matter over with my son; in about fifteen minutes after we went in we heard the report of fire-arms, three or four shots in succession—appeared to be pistol shots from the report; at which time we went to the door. About five or ten minutes after, some one came up and said they had shot the man. I went over and found him lying in the road; two balls had taken effect in his body and one in his head. The persons who had him in custody had fled. The body was taken away in the morning. Report says that the mother of Jones at Payson while sitting in her own house at the time these persons were pursuing Jones.

A person entered the fort, stating that he was pursued and asked for a hiding place. Mr. Leycurgus Wilson asked him what was the matter. The man gave no satisfactory answer. Two men suddenly came running up shouting, arrest that man; suppose one of them to be George W. Hancock, judging from his voice; don't know who the other man was. The two men took the other out towards Payson, the same way he came in. Afterwards heard that the man was Henry Jones. Ten minutes after the two men left, heard the report of fire-arms in the direction they went, heard four shots, three shots in quick succession, the fourth shot a minute later. Heard Hancock was an officer at Payson; saw a dead body next morning about eighty rods from the fort; the body was taken to Payson. No inquest was held at Pondtown; no person called to give evidence. Amos B. Moor being duly sworn, says as follows: I live at Pondtown, Utah county. One night in the month of April, 1858—can't recollect the day, an alarm was raised in the fort, and I was awakened by the guard. When I got up and went out into the fort, some men, can't tell how many, nor who they were, had just taken a man out of the fort; heard afterwards that his name was Henry Jones. After standing there ten or fifteen minutes I heard the report of a gun or pistol in a westerly direction, on the road to Payson. I judged the distance to be seventy-five or one hundred rods from the fort. I heard four shots in pretty quick succession.

In about half an hour after I heard the shots I went out in company with some other persons, don't recollect their names—to see what was the shooting about. I saw a man lying crossways in the middle of the road; he was dead; it was Henry Jones; I was told that was his name.

I don't know that any inquest was held on his body; I heard afterwards that a man named Hatch took the body to Payson. I don't know anything about Henry Jones' mother, nor about the burial of Jones. I had just a short time before that moved to Pondtown from Provo.

I heard that the men who took Jones from Pondtown had come from Payson; this was a report only, I knew nothing of it of my own knowledge.

I went out again at daylight and saw Jones again; I saw two bullet holes, one in his left side and one in his head. I did not go close to the body. I understood that Mr. Hatch, Jones' step-father, so report said, came when the sun was about an hour and a half high, and took the body to Payson.

MURDER OF THE AIKENS AND OTHERS.

The circumstances of the murder of the Aiken party is as follows:

Two brothers, Thomas and John Aiken, well known throughout southern California. A. J. Jones well known in the State as "Honesty Jones" and three other men passed through Carson Valley in the fall of the year, 1857. Many of my constituents recollect the party very well, they designed joining the army in Utah. At Carson they fell in with a party of Mormons on their way to Salt Lake. With these Mormons they traveled to the Goose Creek Mountains, where hearing of the hostility of the Mormons, and the halt of the army on Blacks Fork, they left the Mormons, and to avoid trouble and delay cut across the country leaving Ogden to the right with the hope of reaching the army. The Mormons despatched a messenger to Brigham, who sent after them. They were arrested without difficulty and taken to Salt Lake City. Two of them were murdered in the vicinity of Salt Lake. It was subsequently arranged that the remaining ones should be allowed to return to California. They were sent off in charge of Porter Rockwell, the Danite Chief. They had with them about eight thousand dollars and several valuable animals.

The following affidavit of Alice Lamb tells the sad story of the fate of the last of them:

TERRITORY OF UTAH, } ss:
Jutab County,

Alice Lamb being duly sworn, says she is fourteen years of age, has lived in the City of Nephi for two years, and in the family of John Anthony Wolf, President of one of the Church seventies, late in the fall of 1857. Porter Rockwell and four other men came from towards Salt Lake City about the middle of the afternoon into Nephi, all on horseback, it was on Friday they stopped at Mr. Foots, Mayor of the city, and got their dinner. They all left on the same afternoon on the road to California. Porter Rockwell was going to guard them through the settlement. Mr. Wolf lived right across the street from Mr. Foots. On the next morning Mr. Foots boy Ceynes came over to Mr. Wolf, and asked Mr. Wolf to come over to his fathers. Mr. Wolf said he was sick, and told Ceynes to tell his father to come over there. The boy left and shortly after Mr. Foot, (Bishop,) Jacob Bigler, brother Bryant, his first counsellor, Samuel Pitchforth, a President of one of the Seventies came over to Mr. Wolf. They talked about two of the men that had went through the day before with Porter Rockwell. Coming back in the middle of the night, they talked about two of the men being killed, and these two escaping and getting back. They talked about ten minutes, when it was determined to take them up to Willow Creek, about eight miles north of here, and kill them. They were to pretend to the two men that they were a going to take them back to Salt Lake City. Affiant went over to Mr. Foots in the morning to get Mr. Wolf's paper. Mr. Foot is the Post master. Three families took one paper, and Mr. Foot wanted to read it first. There was a great many people there. Saw one of the men there, his face was bruised all up, his nose was mashed flat to his face, looked as though he had been beaten with a club or gun barrel. He had no shoes on and his clothes were all torn. The mail had come in during Friday night, and Mr. Wolf sent me early next morning for the paper. A little after sun up the two men were put into a wagon. James Cook and James Wolf got into the wagon. Porter Rockwell, Absalom Wolf, and Horner Brown went along as a guard, on horseback, and had guns. Started towards Willow Creek. All came back just after dinner but the two men and Porter Rockwell. After they got back James Wolf said, when they got opposite the Mud Corral on Willow Creek the two men did not want to go down to the Corral, which is four or five hundred yards from the road. We told them they must go down and get something to eat, and Reed drove down; and after we got there, the men got out of the wagon. Our men fired at them and killed them both, then they dug a hole near the creek, and not far from the Corral, and buried them both together. Affiant never heard their names mentioned. Mr. Foot, the people say, has an ivory or pearl handled pistol that belonged to one of them. And Affiant has seen him most ever since riding a horse that one of the men rode. Mr. Foot says they had a heap of money, and further says not.

MURDER OF — FORBES.

The New York Daily Times of August 3d, 1858, contains the following correspondence from Mr. McNeill, a Gentile, who was imprisoned in Salt Lake city, during the winter of '57 and '58, and who afterwards brought suit against Brigham Young for false imprisonment, and was himself subsequently murdered:

"A young man, (Forbes,) whose name McNeill does not remember, came here from California last year, and went to board with a man named Terry, at Springville. Some time afterwards his revolvers were stolen from the house during the day time, and his horse carried off from the field. Terry told him that they had been carried off by Indians. On a Sunday evening, subsequent to the thefts, Terry started for the church, as he said, and the young man went out with him, which is the last time he was ever seen; and the next day Terry was seen riding the stolen horse about town, with the pistol of deceased in his belt."

The following affidavit explains the foregoing statement of McNeill:

Affidavit of Abraham Durfee.

TERRITORY OF UTAH,
Second Judicial District,
Provo City, Utah County. } ss.

Abraham Durfee, being duly sworn, says as follows: I have resided in Springville, Utah county, U. T., for about eight years. In the latter part of January, 1858, Wilber J. Earl, came to me in Springville, and wanted me to go with him to assist him in killing Forbes. I told him that I could not go. He wanted some of the boys. He said it was orders to kill Forbes; did not say from whom the orders came. He wanted me to come over to the north gate the evening that Forbes was to be killed; it was Saturday that he was telling me about it, and Forbes was to be killed the next evening. The next evening (Sunday) I went over to the north gate as requested by Earl. About a half an hour of dark Earl and Sanford Fuller came with Forbes; Wilber J. Earl ordered me to stay at the gate; he said that they were going to Provo. I staid at the gate until Wilber J. Earl and Sanford Fuller came back, which was about midnight. They said that they had got rid of Forbes; that was about all they told me that night. About a week afterwards Wilber J. Earl told me that they had killed Forbes down on Spring creek, about half way to Provo; they said they shot him; they said they had dug a hole near the creek and put him in. I don't know what became of Forbes property; I saw Forbes horse at Partial Terry's since and before Forbes' death; I don't know how Terry became possessed of Forbes' horse. Both Earl and Fuller told me that they had shot Forbes. I don't know where Earl or Fuller are, or either of them, at this time; I saw Earl on the 22d inst. at last at Salt Lake city. I went with him from Springville to Salt Lake city; we parted in the city between the Temple black and the Deseret store, and I have not seen him since. I saw Fuller last in Springville, two weeks ago last Saturday in the evening.

HISTORY OF THE DANITE ORGANIZATION.

In the excellent work of John Hyde, jr., upon Mormonism, we find the following account of the origin of the Danites :

"When the citizens of Carroll and Davis counties, Missouri, began to threaten the Mormons with expulsion in 1838, a death society was organized under the direction of Sidney Rigdon, and with the sanction of Smith. Its first captain was Captain Fearnot, alias David Patton, an apostle. Its object was the punishment of the obnoxious. Some time elapsed before finding a suitable name. They desired one that should seem to combine spiritual authority with a suitable sound. Micah, iv, 13, furnished the first name, 'Arise and thresh, O daughter of Zion; for I will make thy horn iron and thy hoofs brass; and thou shalt beat in pieces many people; and I will consecrate their gain unto, the Lord, and their substance unto the Lord of the whole earth.' This furnished them with a pretext; it accurately described their intentions, and they called themselves the 'Daughters of Zion.' Some ridicule was made at these bearded and bloody 'daughters,' and the name did not sit easily. 'Destroying Angels' came next; the 'Big Fan' of the thresher, that should thoroughly purge the floor, was tried and dropped. Gen. xlix, 17, furnished the name they finally assumed. The verse is quite significant: 'Dan shall be a serpent by the way, an adder in the path that biteth the horse's heels, so that his rider shall fall backward.' The 'Sons of Dan' (or the Danites) was the style they adopted. Many have been the times that they have been adders in the path, and many has fallen backward, and has been seen no more.

"At Salt Lake, among themselves, they ferociously exult in these things rather seek to deny or extenuate them."
